MADEIROS' FATE HANGS IN BALANCE

FULLER MAY REFER TO COUNCIL PLEA FOR RESPITE LATER TODAY

The fate of Celestino Madeiros, convicted slayer in the death house at Charlestown Prison awaiting execution, still hangs in the balance.

Governor Fuller, at a brief session of his council this afternoon, failed to place before it the petition for a stay of execution of the death sentence.

The members of the council were told, however, to hold themselves in readiness for another meeting later in the day, but whether or not the fore them is entirely problematical.

A significant development occurred during the afternoon, when Chairman Frank A. Brooks of the State parole board hurried from Governor Fuller's office and went direct to the death house at Charlestown.

For fifteen minutes Chairman Brooks and Warden Hendry talked with the doomed prisoner. Then, following a brief conference in the warden's office, Chairman Brooks hastened back to the State House, apparently to report to the Governor.

This was taken to indicate that

U. S. AGENTS SHOOT HUB MAN IN 'DOPE' ROUNDUP

Felled by a bullet from a Federal narcotic agent's revolver, Daniel Gerardi of Village street, South End, alleged member of New England's biggest "dope" ring, is under arrest for possessing and selling morphine.

Federal officials threw a cloak of secrecy around the shooting, which occurred in Abbott street, Medford, and not until Medford police went on the warpath did they reveal the cause of the shooting and the extent of Gerardi's injuries.

Gerardi, a bullet wound in his foot and a severe laceration above the right eye, was carried to Haymarket Relief Hospital. No report was made to the Medford authorities and at the hospital officers despatched by Police Lieutenant Connors of Medford were barred from Gerardi's bedside, while all information was withheld.

The arrest of the South End man, who was later discharged from the hospital and released under bail for Federal arraignment, is the climax, according to Narcotic Chief William D. Allen, of a widespread round-up which included seizure of $20,000 worth of morphine.

It was hours after the shooting before Medford authorities could ascertain the shot was fired by a government officer. An investigation was ordered, with the intimation that Fed-

PLAN CUT IN LEVEE AS 4,000 FLEE TO SAFETY

New Orleans, April 27 (A.P.).—With the definite decision that a breach would be made in the levee below New Orleans Friday to save the city, officials today turned their attention toward formulation of plans for getting the levee. A series of conferences was in progress between State and Federal engineers and Major-General Edgar Jadwin, chief of army engineers.

Evacuation of the Poydras section by 4,000 persons began in earnest today as citizens piled household goods and all moveable articles upon any available conveyance and began the trek toward New Orleans, the haven of refuge, for which they sacrificed their homes.

Plans for creating the crevasse were being worked out by Major General Jadwin and other State and Federal engineers. Presumably the breach will be made by dynamiting. It will be approximately 2,000 feet wide, under previous plans discussed, and will flood an area of more than 70,000 acres.

No towns of any size are likely to be touched by the waters. The village of St. Bernard is perilously close to the path the water is ex-

'SHE, I SAY, KILLED HIM'

AS "LOVE WIDOW" HEARD KILLING TALE

A contemptuous smile was all the emotion Mrs. Snyder showed as the confession of Henry Judd Gray, her co-defendant in the murder of her husband, Albert Snyder, was read. Gray pinned the plotting and much of the actual murder upon her.

EX-SENATOR BEVERIDGE PASSES AWAY SUDDENLY

Indianapolis, April 27 (A.P.).—Albert Jeremiah Beveridge, former United States Senator from Indiana, died suddenly here today.

Mr. Beveridge, born in Ohio in 1862, was twice elected to the Senate from Indiana. He retired from the Senate in 1911 and twice sought to return, but was defeated in 1914 as the Progressive party candidate and in 1922 was defeated by Samuel M. Ralston, Democrat.

Death came at his home. He has been working for some time upon his latest book, the "Life of Abraham Lincoln." The book was only half completed.

The former senator's health has not been the best for several months, but his condition was not regarded as serious. His death came as a surprise to close associates who said

MRS. SNYDER SMILES AS GRAY'S 'CONFESSION' IS READ AT DEATH TRIAL

Long Island City, N. Y., April 27.—Judge Scudder denied a motion for a mistrial in the Snyder murder case today. The motion was made by counsel for Mrs. Snyder after several exhibits, including a blood-stained pillow, a rope and a piece of wire had been admitted as evidence over strenuous objections by Attorney Hazelton.

Long Island City, April 27 (A.P.).—District Attorney Newcombe read Henry J. Gray's confession to the Snyder murder case jury today.

The confession related how Gray met Mrs. Snyder and stated that she told him of half a dozen attempts she had made on her husband's life.

Gray told her he thought she was "terrible," the confession continued, "but she played me pretty hard," and finally he agreed to help her.

He got the wire, chloroform and sandwight at her orders, he said, but never really thought he would go through with the scheme until he found himself actually striking the sleeping husband.

Gray asserted that Mrs. Snyder directed him in his every action, and when Albert Snyder seized Gray after the first blow, she took the

Gray Confession Pins Plot on Woman

Long Island City, N.Y., April 27 (I.N.S.).—The full confession of Henry Judd Gray was read in court as follows:

"My name is Henry Judd Gray and I live at No. 37 Wayne avenue, East Orange, N. J.

"I was introduced to this Mrs. Snyder about two years ago in town by Harry Fonson. I believe that he had picked her and another girl up at the restaurant.

"She is a woman of great charm—I probably don't have to tell you that—and I did like her very much and she was good company and apparently a good pal to spend an evening with.

"I think that the intimate relations started in August, if I am not mistaken. I think in September we started to correspond.

"I think it was in November or December that she spoke about increasing the insurance on her husband's life. She told me that it was to be $50,000, as I recall.

$500,000,000 Gone Celebrating the Conqueror Airplanes in Mexico All for a Bob

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1927, by Star Company.

THIS COUNTRY treats the Mississippi problem as a poor man treats his farm, never spending enough to get it in good shape. Scores of millions have been spent on patch work against flood danger. Now comes a flood causing five hundred million dollars' damage. That sum properly spent, under one comprehensive plan, would have prevented this flood and future floods.

NORMANDY prepares to celebrate the 900th anniversary of William the Conqueror's birth, his invasion of England and all the rest of his glory. The celebration should include installation of a big statue, on the Norman Coast, of the tanner's daughter whom the Conqueror's father saw washing clothes in a brook. That peasant girl who became the mother of the Conqueror was honored by the Conqueror's father who married her, and honored ferociously by her son William. After capturing a

RICKARD WILL MATCH DEMPSEY AND PAOLINO

New York, April 27 (A.P.).—After receiving positive assurances today that Jack Dempsey intends to stage a comeback, Tex Rickard announced he will match the former champion for a bout with Paolino Uzcudun on or about July 1, probably at the Yankee Stadium.

Rickard made his announcement after a long conference with Gus Wilson, Dempsey's trainer, who told the promoter that Jack had resumed boxing and was now in condition to remove any doubt about his ability to re-enter the ring.

Rickard also received a direct wire from mpsey, supporting the word Lought East by Wilson and declaring he would be ready by early Summer "to fight anybody."

Sharing his plans immediately, Rickard declared he would ma h the winner of the Paolino-Dempsey fight with the victor of the Maloney-Sharkey bout, scheduled May 19 at the stadium, to determine the opponent sashweight and beat the already stunned man unconscious.

SNYDER JURORS HEAR 'CONFESSION' MADE BY HENRY J. GRAY

STORY OF SLAYING BARED

Gray said in his confession that Mrs. Snyder not only took the sashweight and beat her husband, but also it was she who administered the chloroform.

In Mrs. Snyder's confession, read to the jury yesterday, it was asserted that all blows were struck by Gray and that he soaked the pillows with chloroform and pushed Snyder's face into it.

Wanted to "Back Out"

Gray's confession then told of burning a blood-stained shirt and gown, of turning the house topsy-turvy to simulate a burglary and of Gray's returning to Syracuse after binding Mrs. Snyder.

Gray said that he had decided not to go through with their plans and was leaving the Snyder home when the Snyders returned from a party and he had to run back to the unoccupied bedroom where he was hiding.

Once Mrs. Snyder came to him and said her husband was asleep and "the time has come." He said he was powerless to disobey her.

The confession then related how Gray had established an alibi by getting Haddon Gray, a Syracuse friend, to occupy Judd Gray's hotel room while Judd was away. He exonerated Haddon Gray, who is not related to him, of any knowledge of the real purpose for which the alibi was intended.

Smile Plays on Lips

The reported unemotionality of Mrs. Snyder found no corroboration in the gestures she made as accompaniment to Gray's confession. She did not attain the extremes, but a vestige of virtually every emotion was displayed by her gestures.

She did not laugh aloud, but smiled when District Attorney Newcombs read:

"I would say she played me pretty hard."

Once having puckered her face as if to cry, Mrs. Snyder heard the district attorney read:

"She gave him (Albert Snyder) sleeping powders and turned on the gas."

Her face revealed mirth—a wry smile playing over her lips.

At times, when she caught reporters staring at her, she seemed to respond, assuming a stare of indifference.

When a sentence was read about Gray having given her the sash weight weeks prior to the murder, her lips formed an "Oh," and shook her head negatively.

But said Gray sat through it all, a forlorn and conscience-stricken figure, head on a listless hand and eyes fixed upon a shoe that tapped restlessly on the floor.

When the blood-stained pillow into which Albert Snyder's face was jammed in his last moments of life was exhibited to the jury both de-

Gray in Confession Says Woman Egged Him On With Words of Love

"I saw quite a little of her from then on. She would come in town shopping and call me up. She called me considerably and wrote to me very often. I will say, to use the slang, she did me pretty hard for a while. I was out to her house for luncheon and met her mother.

"I don't think her mother knew of the relations which existed. At the time I met her I told her I was married, I was very happy at home and had a very fine wife.

"As this thing kept growing she made several attempts upon his life. She told me, and I told her I thought she was terrible. I think in two instances she gave him sleeping powders or so-called sleeping powders and turned on the gas.

"I think one gave him bichlorids of mercury at the time he was sick with hiccoughs. She wrote me she gave him four at one time and six at another. All her plans seemed to fail. She started then to hound me on this plan. I said, absolutely no. Then I didn't see her as often as I did. Later she told me that she and her husband had a big fight one night and also said, 'Isn't it strange that some man said that if he didn't treat me better he would kill him?'

"I Was In Hell"

"As I recall it, there were at least five or six attempts that were made on his life, none of which were successful. Then she started to hound me upon this plan to assist her.

"I have always been a gentleman and I have always been absolutely on the level with everybody. I have a good many friends. If I ever have after this I don't know.

"I absolutely refused at first. With some veiled threats and intents of love making, she reached the point where she got in such a whirl that I didn't know where I was.

"During the past two weeks since this plan was concocted I have been in a literal hell. That is the truth, because I have a very fine little wife and a wonderful daughter.

"I went over to her home about two weeks ago tonight on a call from her that day at the office and I think I walked Queens Village for two hours and a half and absolutely gave up any idea of it. I started to bear from her again when I got out on the road and called her up and she said the night of last Saturday when they were going to a party I might get in.

"So I went in the house and I was coming downstairs to beat it when they drove up the front. I had to duck upstairs as I was three-quarters down. I went back to her mother's bedroom and saw her and she came in and came upstairs.

"She asked me if I was there. These implements were underneath her mother's pillow. She had written me all about the plans and details of what it was to be.

"I purchased a window weight and the chloroform for her I bought the handkerchief also. This may sound as though I was more than vitally interested in any outcome. It wasn't, because I never really in my own mind thought that I would go through with it.

"She came in that night and said: 'You are going to do it, aren't you?' I said, 'I think I can.' I sat there for probably an hour.

"She Beat Him"

"They got in about 2 o'clock and I told her to go back to bed, figuring I could steal away. But she didn't go, she sat right there at the doorway and I started after her. She went first.

"I followed her to the bedroom and it was I that hit him the first blow with this window weight. He started to fight and she got very excited. I scarcely knew what did happen for a short time.

"He got me by the necktie and I think, I am positive, that she started to belabor him with this sash weight after that. She had the bottle of chloroform and handkerchief which she poured on the bed.

"I don't know whether she gagged him or not. She passed me a necktie and I tried to tie his hands and I couldn't. She tied his hands with a towel and gave me a necktie to tie his feet and she covered up his head. He was still alive the last I heard.

"She said, 'Is he dead?' I said, 'No.' She said, 'This thing has absolutely got to go through.' I said, 'Well, I am through.' I had lost the picture wire. There were two pieces.

"I am pretty sure if you gentlemen said that there was wire around his neck that it must have been tied by her.

"I don't know whether it was around his neck or not. I went right back to the bathroom. I had blood on my shirt and hands and came back to the bedroom, when I noticed the blood on my shirt and on my vest.

"I had my coat off because it was so hot in there. Things were just a bit hazy during that period.

Burned Garments

"I didn't know where I was. I couldn't seem to collect my brain for a minute. She brought me in a shirt of his and I took off my own shirt. I didn't know that she burned it until after she told me that she also burned a robe of hers which was all covered with blood.

"She called me down to the cellar and told me what she had done and she had hidden the weight. I had it wrapped in paper because I didn't think it would hurt so much.

"I came upstairs and started to throw things about, as you know to make it appear as though it were a robbery. I know I sat there and had three or four drinks.

"And this story was then thought of. She said that some Italian had come into the house or some Italian had been seen around there.

"I happened to pick up this piece of Italian paper in a train coming over that night and I put it in my pocket, which accounts for that part of it.

"I am there and said, 'I don't think you better make it one, you better make it two.' That is as far as plans went. I stayed there, sat more or less in a daze until I suddenly discovered it was getting daylight and I left for Syracuse.

"I got back to Syracuse. I had said that I would go to Haddon Gray's house for supper that night and I also wanted to call up Mrs. Webb Howe. Haddon Gray was asleep and his wife said he would call me back.

"After that I went to the hotel. I had asked Haddon Gray, in case any telephone calls came in from my own home, to come over and make the bed appear as though I had been sleeping in it.

"The sash weight was bought in Kingston, N. Y. I bought it in Kingston a week prior to meeting her and her daughter at Henri's restaurant, where she called me up, and I was to bring it over and give it to her. That was Saturday, March 5, I believe. I bought the chloroform the same day. It was my idea to just simply chloroform him and the window weight came as an aftermath.

"She took the window weight with her. I had the chloroform myself.

"When I got to the Snyder house on Saturday night the implements were under the mother's pillow. She had put them there and instructed me to find them there, together with liquor.

Tells of His Alibi

"The letters mailed from Syracuse were mailed by Haddon Gray. I made that arrangement. The special delivery was directed to Mrs. Gray and the other was directed to J. Gray. I had an arrangement with Mrs. Snyder that when I wrote letters to her to address the letters as J. Gray She had evidently some way that the postman down there knew to deliver the letters to her.

"I arranged with Haddon Gray to disarrange my bed. There was blood stains on my vest. I told Haddon I went down to see her and was in the closet waiting when two men came in and bound her and also him. I said I thought he was dead.

"I heard Mrs. Snyder and her husband and the little girl come in about 7 o'clock. As they passed down the hallway they passed the room in which I was.

"My coat was off but I had on my vest. It was terrifically hot in there and I had my vest opened down the front. I was in the house approximately two hours before Mrs. Snyder and the little girl came

Feared Her Threats

"The purpose of the special delivery letter to Mrs. Gray and the other letter to J. Gray (Mrs. Snyder) were for the purpose of throwing anyone off the track. I wrote with the intention of having the same mailed at 6 o'clock to establish my presence in Syracuse at 6 o'clock or later.

"Mrs. Snyder tied a towel around Mr. Snyder's wrists. Because it was dark I cannot definitely identify the towel now shown me as that particular towel.

"The veiled threats that I referred to were threats Mrs. Snyder made to expose to my wife the relations between her and myself unless I helped her with the plan.

"Mr. Snyder may not have been dead at the time I had struck him on the head with the sash weight. Mrs. Snyder had also struck him and administered the chloroform."

GENERAL NEWS SECTION

DANCER CLAIMS SHIP DOCTOR 'BUNGLED'

Baltimore, April 27 (A.P.).—Fawn Gray, dancer, today filed suit in Federal Court here against the Panama-Pacific Steamship Company for $100,000 damages, alleging enforced vaccination by physicians of one of its ships.

She was bound for Panama to fulfill an engagement, she declared, when ship's doctors forced her to be vaccinated—on the thigh after she protested its being done on her arm.

Miss Gray alleges the operation was performed in a "careless and reckless manner," obliging her to undergo hospital treatment and that she is "seriously and permanently injured about her body and limbs, causing great physical pain and anguish."

DIVORCES DAUGHTER OF RUPERT HUGHES

Los Angeles, April 27 (A.P.).—J. H. Saunders, short story writer, was granted a divorce in Superior Court from Mrs. Avis Hughes Saunders, a daughter of Rupert Hughes, novelist.

Saunders charged his wife with cruelty, declaring she frequently threatened suicide, was in a continual state of mental depression and had fits of anger in which she indulged regardless of the presence of others. Mrs. Saunders, now said to be in New York, will receive $75 a week alimony.

THREATENS TO PUT DYER BACK AS POLICE HEAD

Attacking the decision of Judge Michael H. Sullivan reinstating Police Lieutenant Thomas J. O'Hara in the Revere police department, Mayor John E. Walsh of Revere declared today that he would appeal to the Supreme Court.

He also asserted that if O'Hara eventually is reinstated, he, the mayor, will reinstate John J. Dyer as police chief. Mayor Walsh removed Dyer some weeks ago.

"The reason I will put Dyer back is that I don't believe Dyer is one-half so bad as O'Hara," the mayor explained.

"I have instructed City Solicitor John Di Nezza to appeal the O'Hara case to the Supreme Court of Massachusetts. I intend to fight this case to the limit.

HEARD OF RUMORS.

"As far back as two weeks ago word reached me that the decision had already been reached by Judge Sullivan and that it was common talk in police and court circles in Boston that O'Hara was to be reinstated.

"The first actual knowledge I had of the decision was when I read the newspapers last night. It seems to me that as Mayor I should have received proper notice from Judge Sullivan before the newspapers, court attaches and street curb politicians, as well as the radio, had been informed of the decision.

"I look upon this as an injustice in every way. What's the use of being Mayor of a city and trying to give it a clean police department when an officer gets tangled in a mess, is tried before me, found guilty and discharged, then appeals to the district court for a hearing and is found innocent?

"MAKES ME THE GOAT"

"Judging by Judge Sullivan's decision, Lieutenant O'Hara is the martyr and I am a goat.

"There are a great many things in this O'Hara case, if I wanted to tell them, that would rock the city of Revere. I will say, however, that if O'Hara is reinstated by the Supreme Court, I will immediately place back in position as chief, John J. Dyer.

"This would be folly on my part, of course, because since I appointed Captain William E. Tappan in charge of the department, we have now a real police department. But I do not believe Dyer is one-half so bad as O'Hara."

One of the 8,000, more or less, Boston University students who gathered at Boston Arena to sing the praises of the various B. U. athletic teams was Goldie Pontell. It was the second annual all-university assembly and there was a superabundance of enthusiasm and "pep." All the stars of all sports were praised. It was a gala day for the boys and girls of B. U., and even President Marsh and the faculties of all the departments were on hand to hear the skill of B. U. athletes praised.

FULLER'S AUTO FEE PLAN IS KILLED

By unanimous vote in the House, and with only one dissenting voice in the Senate, the Legislature today rejected the proposal of Governor Fuller to substitute for a flat registration fee of $3 a 30 per cent. registration fee, in the gasoline tax bill.

Debate in the lower chamber was featured by a vigorous attack upon Commissioner of Public Works William F. Williams by Representative Joseph Martin of Marblehead, after Representative Henry L. Shattuck of Boston had explained the Governor's fear of a decrease in revenue was based on figures given by Williams.

GOVERNOR IS FLAYED.

"I wouldn't condemn even a yellow dog on any figures furnished by Commissioner Williams," the Marblehead solon shouted. "Not one of his figures is right. His attitude has been that we must raise the money his way for him to spend. It's about time we canned him."

Martin accused the Governor of having wiped out all the work of weeks spent in drawing the bill "with one stroke of his pen."

"The 30 per cent. plan," he continued, "would be a great asset to the manufacturer and the dealer, as they would have to pay only 50 cents for registering their cars. The man who would benefit is the man who sells cars."

WAIT FIVE YEARS IS PLEA.

Representative Carroll L. Meins of Boston, against the amendment, pleaded with the House "not to duck the issue and let us be the goats." The Governor, he said, asked for a two-cent gas tax with a lower registration fee in his inaugural.

A prediction that the people would "murder" the gas tax if it goes on the ballot again was made by Representative Martin Lomasney of the West End.

"Wait at least five years before we try to ram it down their throats again," said Lomasney.

EX-CHIEF HELD ON CHARGES BY WOMAN

Arrested by the man who replaced him as police chief, former Chief William M. McArthur of Cohasset was released under $200 bail in West Roxbury District Court today on a charge of threatening assault and battery on Mrs. Margaret Dunn of Centre street, Jamaica Plain.

McArthur pleaded not guilty and at the request of the police the case was continued to May 4. Mrs. Dunn was not in court.

The arrest is the culmination of a long series of troubles for McArthur, who, long known in the South Shore town as the arch foe of bootleggers and beach petters, resigned on April 1.

He was taken into custody and handed over to the Jamaica Plain authorities by Chief Hector Pelltier, former State police corporal, who acted on a warrant issued in Boston, and taken to Cohasset by Special Officers Bates and Shoan of the Jamaica Plain division.

McArthur is married and has two children. Mrs. Dunn, listed by the police as the complainant in the case, is said to have formerly lived in Cohasset.

When McArthur took command of the Cohasset police department two years ago he issued an ultimatum to rum-runners and bootleggers which he carried out to the letter of the law.

He disappeared from home in August, 1925, and was mysteriously absent for two days. Returning he explained that he had suffered an attack of aphasia, or lapse of memory, brought on by overwork. The selectmen, passing a vote of confidence, kept him in office.

1 KILLED, 16 INJURED, IN N. Y. SUBWAY CRASH

New York April 27 (A.P.)—Seventeen persons were injured, one man fatally, when two northbound Seventh avenue local subway trains crashed at 72nd street and Broadway, today. The entire West Side uptown system was tied up for more than an hour.

DAVIS FEARED PLANE WRECK

New York, April 27 (A.P.)—Lieutenant-Commander Noel Davis, killed in the crash of his airplane, the American Legion, greatly deplored the fact that his craft weighed about half a ton more than the plans called for, according to Edwin Wildman of New York, a personal friend, in a Washington dispatch to the New York Times today.

Wildman is the personal representative of Bartlett Arkell, business man, who had offered a $35,000 supplementary prize to Davis for the Paris-to-New York flight.

Wildman said the overweight was not a matter for which any one was to blame.

He himself was to have gone to Langley Field to be taken up by Davis but the latter insisted he would not jeopardize the life of any one but himself or his side until he had satisfied himself of the ability of his machine to go aloft with a full load.

BEVERIDGE, EX-SENATOR, DIES SUDDENLY

there was no intimation yesterday his condition was critical.

Mr. Beveridge's death was caused by heart disease. The heart ailment had caused some concern to immediate members of his family during the last two weeks and Dr. William Thayer of Johns Hopkins University was called here. Dr. Thayer and Dr. Charles F. Emerson of Indianapolis were hopeful of Mr. Beveridge's recovery.

The former Senator had not been confined to his bed, but on orders of his physicians had been living quietly while undergoing treatment. He was 64 years old.

Albert J. Beveridge was born in Highland County, Ohio. After the Civil War his parents moved to Illinois. All through his boyhood he was forced to work. He was a railway laborer at 14 and a teamster and logger at 15. On the side, in his spare time, he studied.

On a $50 loan he went to De Pauw University, and by toiling in an eating club and peddling books during vacation he worked his way to a degree. During his college days he achieved the reputation for oratory which stuck with him during his political career. He won intercollegiate honors in oratory, and the Republican party leaders, at that time looking for spellbinders in their campaigns through the Middle West, hired him to speak for them.

From his college days to the time of his death he was active in the affairs of the party. He spent much of his time writing and during the war achieved probably world-wide notoriety by his story of the war from his viewpoint when he returned here from a visit to Europe in 1915. His "Life of John Marshall" won note.

For many years during his later life he spent his summers at Beveridge Farms. His career, started as a ploughboy on a middle western farm, was colored and varied.

DRIVES TRUCK IN A WINDOW; NO ONE HURT

To avoid hitting a touring car which had suddenly slowed up to turn a corner, Vincent Franco, a truck driver of Fairmount street, Arlington, drove his truck across the pavement and into the front of a store at Main street and Frederick avenue, Medford, today.

The store is owned by Hackadoor Exhajarian and the truck completely demolished the windows in the place. No one was injured. The touring car which the truck driver sought to avoid was driven by Rufus Bineo of Fremont street, Somerville.

DEDHAM MAY GO TO LAW OVER POLICE STATION

Dedham faces a heated court controversy over the new $30,000 police headquarters building which was voted by the town meeting last month. This was begun today by a petition filed in Superior Court in which an injunction is asked to prevent the selectmen from submitting the question to the town voters at a general election. In a petition recently placed in the hands of the selectmen citizens protest against building and ask a referendum.

FLOOD CRISIS IS PASSED, SAYS HOOVER

New Orleans, April 27 (A.P.).—The crisis probably has passed in the Mississippi River flood situation and no more extensive hardship, suffering and loss of life and property is anticipated, in the opinion of Secretary of Commerce Hoover, President Coolidge's observer. Hoover arrived today, completing his tour of the area from Memphis to New Orleans.

In Mississippi and Arkansas, Hoover said, he found no unsatisfactory conditions and only the necessity of maintaining adequate relief measures. He said, however, that his view of the end of flood danger may be upset by later developments.

Mr. Hoover expressed his opinion of the flood situation briefly as follows:

"I believe the flood dead will not greatly exceed 200.

"The property loss will probably be not much greater than 150,000.

GREATEST PROBLEM.

"Our greatest problem is the rehabilitation of the homeless persons in their former habitations and the re-establishment of agricultural production in the stricken regions."

Mr. Hoover conferred with New Orleans citizens in charge of the flood situation, and during the afternoon will inspect the Poydras section, where the proposed emergency levee break will be made.

Memphis, Tenn., April 27 (A.P.).—Relief measures advanced throughout the flood-stricken districts of the Mississippi Valley today with accelerated speed.

The emergency situation in reference to the whole area affected, however, was gradually being brought under control, said Henry M. Baker, director of flood relief for the Red Cross.

HEALTH CONDITIONS.

Sanitary and health conditions in the crowded refugee centres have occupied the attention of the relief forces. That epidemics may be avoided and the general health of the refugees promoted, a conference of the health officers of the seven States affected was called here today. Matters for discussion included immediate measures for vaccination of refugees.

3,000 Flood Refugees at Arkansas City Saved

Memphis, Tenn., April 27 (I.N.S.).—Rescue operations centred today at Arkansas City, where 3,000 refugees have been marooned for forty-two hours. They were being taken by barges to Pine Bluff and Helena, Ark.

Otherwise, flood conditions in the Mississippi delta were unchanged today. Greenville and surrounding towns were still under water, but most of the refugees have been taken to Vicksburg for safety.

Another levee break was reported over night. The dyke near Cecelia broke, flooding the Arkansas towns of Kilso, Enmore, Dermot, Wilson and Tyler.

Flood waters north of Memphis were slowly receding and in northwest Tennessee, southeast Missouri and Kentucky the farmers were planning to return to their homes.

More than 3,500 of the flood refugees are encamped on the fair grounds here.

Quincy Family Fled for Lives in Flood

Word was received in Quincy today that Mr. and Mrs. Charles Yule, former Quincy residents, and their two children, Avis and Bruce, were forced to flee from their home in New Orleans and narrowly escaped drowning in the flood that swept over the city.

The report stated that the children are on the way to the home of their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. William Cushing of Cushing avenue, Wollaston.

MOVE 4,000 TO RESCUE CITY FROM FLOOD

pected to take but it was thought that it would escape.

Truck farmers and trappers are the main inhabitants of the doomed area.

Approximately 4,000 persons must be moved out of the area before the evasee is made.

A small private levee at Anguilla Miss., has been swept away by the waters from the Steps Landing crevasse many miles north of the town and as a consequence about 2,500 persons are suffering from lack of food and shelter. About 200 people had taken refuge on a bridge near the place. Water was said to be five feet deep in parts of the town.

Jola and sections north of Belzoni have sent urgent calls for aid.

SITUATION DESPERATE

In southern Arkansas, efforts were being made to save the Arkansas river levee at South Bend. The situation was considered desperate. A dozen other towns were in undated by the flood of the Arkansas and Ouachita rivers. Dermott, Miller, Eudora, Arkansas City, Lake ton, Watson, Kelso, Mcghee, Oneata. A dozen other towns were included among these.

With water in some parts of the towns reported twelve feet deep and rising at the rate of an inch an hour Lake Village faced the crisis of the flood. With all avenues of escape gone except by boat, there were 5,000 persons to be taken from the town. Food supplies were expected to last through the day. Boats from Eudora were dispatched to take off women and children before evacuating the entire city.

HOMELESS HOUSED

More than 4,000 refugees from Mcgehee, Dermott, Miller and the surrounding countryside have flocked into Monticello and with the movement still in progress, churches, schools and private homes were opened to the homeless.

In the upper reaches of the flooded Arkansas and Mississippi sections the situation was reported greatly improved.

A vessel has gone to Arkansas City to aid some 6,000 persons reported on levees or marooned in the country.

From many parishes in northern Louisiana refugees continued to stream into Vicksburg, Natchez and other high places.

The flood crest of the Mississippi was rolling between Helena and Arkansas City. Along the whole stretch of river from these points eastward levees were being topped or bolstered at weak points, while in many localities armed guards patrolled the bulwarks to prevent dynamiting of them.

RUSH TENTS TO FLOOD VICTIMS FROM BOSTON

Within three hours after orders by radio were received at the army base depot 1,500 army tents were speeding to the victims of the Mississippi Valley flood today. It was the first shipment of relief equipment sent from Boston and Colonel W. C. Jones, in command at the depot, praised the co-operation of New Haven Railroad officials who made possible the record time.

SHELTER FOR 12,000.

As soon as the orders were received from Washington Colonel Jones ordered out all his men and the tents were loaded into freight cars at the rate of 500 an hour. They are capable of taking care of 12,000 persons.

To date 80,000 blankets and 12,000 army cots have been sent to the relief of the flood victims by army depots throughout the country.

While the army was speeding its shipment of tents on the way South the Metropolitan Chapter Red Cross was continuing its drive for the $100,000 quota in the national relief fund. Contributions continued to pour in and the fund is on its way to the $60,000 mark.

Gray's Grim Day in Court Sees Trap Clamped

By MARGERY REX.

Queens County Court House, Long Island City, N. Y., April 27.—This is Gray's day. His confession was read and analyzed, as was the confession of Ruth Snyder yesterday.

Standing room only in court today. Dozens of standees, more men than women, lean against the walls and the broad pillars between the high windows.

Cessation several times in Gray's examination. His captors would ply him with significant questions, then wait awhile then ask some more. Give him time to pull himself together again. Just like riding a horse. You hold the reins tight and then loose. Give and take.

SEEKING A LOOP-HOLE

Gray liked this technique of the State's righteous surlooity for he co-operated pleasantly with his questioners and even thanked the police for their "courtesy." After all, telling his story must have been a relief. It was a burden Gray could not manage, accustomed as he was only to the weight of innocent sample cases.

Gray during his examination by the district attorney, took no "catnap" as defendant Snyder did.

Millard, of counsel for Gray, is looking for loop-holes today just as the lawyers for defendant Snyder did yesterday. Why was Gray examined without a lawyer and why was there no magistrate's court at 3 a. m. so Judd could have a trial and go on?

"I told her I was married, there could never be anything between us," Judd confessed he told Ruth in the early days of their acquaintance. By "anything" he meant "marriage," not the "murder" that is now between them, divided equally as to charges of guilt.

WHY RUTH FAILED.

Mrs. Amelia Myers, "New York's most perfect mother," comes to the trial every day. This is her opinion of Ruth Snyder, also a mother, but not so perfect:

"Ruth Syder has a wonderful character, but she used it in the wrong way. She could have been a perfect mother if she tried to be.

"The trouble was that she tried to get more out of life than there is in it—more fun, I mean.

"In place of this, if she had worried and sacrificed herself for her husband, a man of whom she should have been proud, instead of seeking sexual pleasure, she would have been happier.

"Self was her only thought, no thought for her daughter, for her mother, for her home, the atmosphere of which she poisoned for the innocent persons in it by her intrigue.

"This deceit, practiced before her own mother, shows how low she had fallen."

Mrs. Mulhauser, the cross-the-street neighbor, takes the stand, a plump, rosy, placid bit of suburban femininity, pulled into the sordid tragedy. It was she whom Lorraine fetched the murder morning to see what the horrid "burglars" had done to mama, tying her hands and feet so cruelly.

GOES ON A "BAT."

Ruth Snyder is smilingly scornful as her neighbor becomes a witness.

"How's things?" Mrs. Mulhauser asked Ruth one day.

"I'm going in town to get drunk and end it all," was the delightful reply of the blonde who lived in the pink and blue house that Albert's "jack" built.

Mulhauser, the witness' husband, now broadcasting into the "mike." He is as frail in appearance as his mate is sturdy.

MRS. SNYDER SMILES AT GRAY'S STORY

fendants averted their eyes.

The jury was also shown the towel that bound Snyder's hands, the necktie that bound the feet, the wire that strangled him, and the cotton pad which, soaked in chloroform, was tied across his nose and mouth.

e on previous days women outnumbered the men in the crowd that thronged the court house for today's session of the trial.

Admission now still by card only, and no one not in possession of a ticket was allowed to reach the floor where the great glass-domed court room is situated.

The jury came into court just at 10 o'clock.

Justice Scudder entered a moment later and the defendants were led in by prison attendants.

Mrs. Snyder, in the lead, seemed cool, as she has been throughout, and Gray marched in with swinging arms as though taking part in a military drill.

The first witness was James Conroy, the young assistant district attorney to whom Gray first confessed. Conroy boarded the train on which Gray was being brought to New York after his arrest in Syracuse at Albany.

As the train reached Poughkeepsie, according to previous testimony of police officers who made the arrest, Gray "broke" and confessed his participation in the crime.

District Attorney Newcombe offered Gray's sworn confession in evidence and it was accepted by the Court.

Samuel Miller, counsel for Gray, then began questioning Conroy.

Q.—When did you first see Gray?

A.—When I boarded a train at Albany, about 9 p. m., March 18.

Q.—Did you question Gray on the train?

A.—Yes.

Q.—Were detectives kept questioning him constantly?

A.—No.

Q.—How long did the questioning continue?

A.—An hour or hour and a half of the three-hour journey.

Q.—Did you tell Gray Mrs. Snyder had confessed?

A.—No.

Q.—Did you tell him she was arrested?

A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you tell him anything he said would be used against him?

A.—No.

Conroy then told of taking Gray to Newcombe's office where the prisoner was told Mrs. Snyder had confessed and where he made his own confession.

As the questions and answers continued, Gray conferred in a whisper with William Millard of his counsel, showing more animation than he has since the trial opened ten days ago.

Miller tried to bring out that at the time of Gray's confession Gray was exhausted from loss of sleep. Conroy denied that this was the case.

Joked While on Train

The district attorney then asked what Gray's condition was on the trip.

"Very good," Conroy said. "He was laughing and joking and seemed very keen."

"Do you know," Atty. Millard of Gray's counsel then asked, "whether anyone on the train said 'you'd better come across, Gray. Mrs. Snyder has given you away'?"

"I know of no such remark," replied the witness.

A letter mailed by Haddon Gray in Syracuse while Gray was in New York the day of the killing, as part of the alibi scheme, was then entered in evidence.

This letter, addressed to "J. Gray" at the Snyders' address, was read to the jury.

It referred to Mrs. Snyder as "Dear Gertrude" and related at some length the reasons why Judd Gray had to be in Syracuse that day and could not be with her.

The letter referred to her place for the card party and hoped "you will behave yourself."

It was signed "Bud," Judd Gray's nickname.

Mrs. Harriet A. Mulhauser of Queens Village then took the stand. She lives directly opposite the Snyder home. The district attorney questioned her.

Q.—Do you remember the morning of March 20? A.—Yes.

Q.—Why? A.—Because little Lorraine Snyder came running over for me and I went to the Snyder home.

Q.—What did you find Mrs. Snyder? A.—Lying on the floor in her nightdress with her ankles tied.

Q.—Were her wrists tied? A.—No, but there was some gauze beside her. She said: "I got an awful whack on the head." Then I called the police and then my husband came in. He discovered that Snyder was dead.

Mrs. Mulhauser then related how Mrs. Snyder had told her the burglary story and of being overcome by "a dark man with a big mustache."

Q.—Did you examine her head? A.—Yes.

Q.—Any bruise? A.—None at all.

Q.—Were her feet tied tightly? A.—Very loosely.

Q.—Did you have any conversation with Mrs. Snyder during the week at the end of which Snyder was killed? A.—Yes.

Q.—What did she say? A.—She said she was going to get drunk and end it all with him.

Q.—"Him" meant Snyder? A.—Yes.

The witness was then amused and her husband, Louis E. Mulhauser, took the stand.

He said Lorraine Snyder telephoned him to follow his wife to the Snyder home. He told of finding Snyder dead in bed. Mrs. Snyder was lying on the floor at the head of the stairs at that time, he said, with feet and hands bound.

The policeman were then called in and the witness identified them as the first to arrive after him at the Snyder home.

Dr. Vincent Justin followed Mulhauser. He told of going, as an ambulance doctor, to the Snyder home on March 20, pronouncing Snyder dead after examining him.

Counsel for Mrs. Snyder took him for cross-examination.

Q.—Did you write in your report that Mrs. Snyder was suffering from shock and concussion? A.—Yes.

Then the State took him for redirect.

Q.—What was your full report?

A.—My diagnosis was shock and concussion with a question mark.

Q.—Was the diagnosis of Mrs. Snyder based on examination or her statement? A.—Only on her statement.

COME or you'll be sorry when you hear your neighbors talking about this great value!

JUDGE REJECTS STUDENT'S PLEA OF AIDING GIRL

George A. Page, Jr., Harvard student, appeared in East Cambridge district court today with a plea that Judge Joseph F. Donovan would not accept.

Page was charged with speeding in an auto on Memorial drive, driving with his arm around a girl and without a certificate of registration.

He pleaded guilty to speeding, not guilty to operating "with a person so seated as to impede proper operation" and not guilty to the no-registration charge.

"We had received a message that the girl's mother was sick," he told the court. "I was hurrying to get her home and had my arm around her to comfort her."

"Twenty-five dollars," said Judge Donovan and he also fined Page $20 for speeding and $25 for no registration. Page paid.

KNIGHTS TOLD ABOUT "BOLSHEVIK EVILS"

Bolshevism and its attendant evils were discussed by speakers at the nineteenth annual banquet of John J. Williams Council, K. of C. in Washington Irving School Hall, Roslindale. John F. Malley, former Internal Revenue collector, the principal speaker, spoke on the duty of knighthood in combatting vicious propaganda. Attorney Charles F. Hilly, trustee of the council, presented Past Grand Knight William T. Miller a gold watch and chain as a token of the esteem of the members for his untiring work for the council.

Life Sour for Two Dills as Lynn Judge Puts Them in Real Pickle

The runaway escapades of the Dill brothers, Colburn and Floyd, of Lynn, finally landed them in a pickle today, Judge Ralph W. Reeve of Lynn District Court placing them there.

Floyd, twelve, goes to the Psychopathic Hospital for ten days' observation by order of the court.

His brother, aged eight, will be sent by similar order to live with his grandparents in a small Maine town.

After countless journeys far from the home of their father and stepmother, Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Dill of Franklin street, during which they kept police of several North Shore cities and towns busy hunting for them, the brothers were hailed before Judge Reeve, booked as neglected children.

One more veto by Governor Fuller was overridden by the House today, when the bill authorizing the town of Natick to reimburse James J. Doyle, an injured fireman, was again shot through, over the veto, by a vote of 178 to 26.

Awarded $2,000

Worcester, April 26.—A jury in Superior Court awarded $2,000 to Lizzie Neraiff in a suit against the Worcester County Institution for Savings to recover for injuries suffered in a revolving door.

ST. MIHIEL FUND DEFENDED BY WASHBURN

Not one dollar ever was spent on the proposed St. Mihiel war memorial project without the consent of the Governor and Council, despite Governor Fuller's insinuations of irregularities, Representative Slater Washburn told the House today in a reply to the Governor.

Himself a member of the original memorial commission for two years, Representative Washburn, of Worcester, questioned the motive of the Governor in waiting until the fag end of the legislative session before making his insinuations relative to the commission's spending $60,000 without consent of State officials.

DENIES CASH MISSPENT.

Washburn's reply to the Governor was made just before the House accepted the Governor's recommendation on the $15,000 memorial resolve that he be authorized to name three out of six members of the new commission instead of one out of four in a smaller commission.

Speaking on the recommendation, Representative Washburn said that he did not know who wrote the accompanying message, but that he resented the implication that some $60,000 had been spent by the original commission without State consent.

"Not one dollar has ever been spent without the consent of the Governor and Council," the objector declared. "And it was necessary, under orders of the Legislature, for the commission to go to France. The bill was signed by Governor Coolidge and the men on the commission were of integrity and had high war records.

"I am amazed that, with the Governor's frequent trips to France in the last four years, he has not discovered that this land is just a dump and seen to it that action was taken."

PROF. M'CLUSKY FREED OF 'PEEPING TOM' CHARGE

Lafayette, Ind., April 27 (A.P.).—Charges filed recently in City Court under the "peeping Tom" statute against Dr. F. Dean McClusky, director of the division of educational reference at Purdue University, were dismissed by Judge Raymond Robertson upon motion of Prosecutor Mark L. Thompson.

The motion was accompanied by a statement signed by the three material witnesses requesting that the case be dismissed. The charges resulted when a Purdue student chased McClusky from a co-ed's porch. McClusky declared he was investigating complaints of a co-ed smoking.

YOUTH APPROACHES 150TH HOUR OF DEATH STRUGGLE

Roanoke, Va., April 27 (A.P.)—Complete exhaustion and traces of hypostatic pneumonia, today crept over the once sturdy body of Walter L. Hoothe, farmer youth, as he approached the 150th hour in his friends' attempt to keep him alive by artificial respiration.

The dramatic struggle against physicians' prediction of death went on unceasingly, however, with alternating pairs of companions swinging the lad's arms up and down, forcing breath into the tired lungs. Boothe was stricken Thursday as he was preparing for an operation for a dislocated vertebrae.

J. J. DAVIS VISITS FIRST COTTON MILL

Pawtucket, R. I., April 27 (A.P.)—Secretary of Labor James J. Davis was a guest of Pawtucket today and was scheduled to make two speeches. Mr. Davis arrived, accompanied by U. S. Senator Jesse H. Metcalf of Rhode Island, and was greeted by a committee headed by Mayor Charles H. Holt.

Early in the afternoon he visited the old Slater mill, built in 1793, the first cotton factory in America. Later he was to be taken on a tour of the city's principal industries. Gifts consisting of products of these industries will be presented to him for Mrs. Davis, whose birthday occurs today.

Taken by Death

JOHN G. JOYCE

Funeral services will be conducted tomorrow morning for the founder and president of Joyce Brothers and Company, Inc.

Funeral services for John G. Joyce, founder and president of Joyce Brothers and Company, Inc., will be conducted from his home at No. 1033 Center street, Newton, at 9 o'clock tomorrow morning.

There will be a solemn high mass of requiem at the Church of the Sacred Heart in Newton Center at 10 o'clock. Burial will be at New Calvary Cemetery in Dorchester.

The deceased was born in Petersham, January 28, 1860, and attended Barre Academy. In 1889, he and a brother, T. W. Joyce, began the clothing firm which has since grown to one of the largest in New England, and now embraces seven stores.

Mr. Joyce was a member of numerous organizations, including the Elks, Knights of Columbus, Chamber of Commerce, Woodland Golf Club and others. He is survived by five children and nine grandchildren.

FORGER GIVEN FIVE YEARS

Pleading guilty, Lawrence J. Crowley, thirty-one, of Cambridge, who was alleged to have taken $14,000 from Boston trust companies by forged checks, was today sentenced in Superior Court to serve five years and one day at Concord Reformatory.

Crowley was brought here from Florida, where he was located after a long search, and he saved the county the expense of transportation for himself and the arresting officers by driving back in an automobile purchased with the stolen money.

Besides the automobile, Crowley, according to the police, furnished a luxurious bachelor apartment in Cambridge and lived in dashing style until the trail became hot and he fled to the South.

LONG FALL FATAL TO RALPH W. FIELDING

Ralph W. Fielding, manager of a Revere roller coaster, who fell from its top to the ground while inspecting it several days ago, died today at the Chelsea Memorial Hospital. He is survived by a widow and six months' old baby.

1 DIES, 2 HURT, IN IPSWICH CRASH

Newburyport, April 27.—One man was killed and a woman and another man were injured today when the automobile in which they were riding skidded off Newburyport turnpike at Ipswich.

The driver, James A. Smith, 26, of Harvard street, Lynn, was arrested by State police and held in $300 bail by Judge Sears in district court here, charged with operating an automobile so that the lives and safety of the public might be endangered.

Albert E. Hickey, 26, of West Neptune street, Lynn, was pinned beneath the wreckage of the car and was dead when extricated.

Miss Isabel Webster, 21, of Smith street, Lynn, who, like Smith, escaped with minor injuries, was taken with Smith to the local hospital in the automobile of Henry Krohn whose car was commandeered by State police and Ipswich officers.

The woman was later taken to her home and Smith was removed to the police station.

Hickey is survived by his wife, a daughter, Virginia, and parents, Mr. and Mrs. Albert A. Hickey. He was a former Lynn English High School athlete and was employed for three years as an insurance collector.

DEATH CAR DRIVER HELD FOR TRIAL IN LAWRENCE

Lawrence, April 27 (A.P.).—As a result of an inquest today before Judge A. G. Pierce, Charles J. Whittaker, 20, of North Andover, will face trial on May 4, for manslaughter in connection with the death of Leo Callahan of Methuen, injured fatally on March 14 by the defendant's auto.

The court found death was caused by the negligent manner of Whittaker "in operating a motor vehicle at night, with four people on one seat and traveling at a speed sufficient to throw a person 15 feet through the air."

Another Wilson Foe Dies

Trenton, N. J., April 27 (A.P.).—The death last night of James R. Nugent, for 20 years Democratic leader of New Jersey, is the second within a month of those who started Woodrow Wilson on his political fame, only to break with him and lose power as the Wilson prestige increased.

SHERIFF GOES HUNTING AND BAGS WOMAN'S HAT

Providence, April 27 (A.P.)—Sheriff Fred Bull of Kingston tramped around for hours, climbing stone walls and tearing his way through briars for hours. He was looking for woodchucks.

Along about 3 o'clock he gave up in disgust and started home. He had crawled through the last barbed wire fence and was approaching the last stone wall when he espied, on the wall, a semblance of Johnny Chuck, himself.

Away blazed the gun. There was a scream and Bull was startled to see a woman suddenly stand up on the other side of the wall and examine her bullet-riddled Easter hat of woodchuck shade.

"I guess it was lucky for me that is was an officer of the law who aimed at me," was the woman's parting shot as the sheriff went on his way.

Mistake, That's All!

Buried by Cave-In

MADEIROS AND CHAPLAIN IN PRAYER

certain aspects of the Madeiros case are not cleared up in the Governor's mind and for this reason he sought information which only the slayer himself could give.

Madeiros' reprieve expires at midnight, tonight, and unless the Governor intervenes again the man will go to the electric chair some time within a week.

The Governor, under a ruling of the Supreme Court of Massachusetts, does not have to consult the members of his council before granting a reprieve to a man awaiting death in the electric chair.

He may consult the council if he wishes, but this is not compulsory. At any time before the death sentence is actually carried out the Governor can, on his own initiative, reprieve Madeiros.

IN SACCO-VANZETTI CASE.

Madeiros, convicted of slaying a Wrentham bank cashier, has been reprieved by Governor Fuller, on account of the "confession" made by the prisoner that he participated in the South Braintree double murder for which Sacco and Vanzetti were convicted. The "confession" declared that Sacco and Vanzetti were not members of the slayer band.

Two members of the council, following today's brief session, expressed the belief that the Governor would not interfere in the Madeiros case again, and that the slayer will be allowed to go to his doom.

Councillor Chester I. Campbell, following the meeting, said: "I didn't believe the Governor would present the petition for an appeal for a reprieve to us. I don't look for the Governor to interfere in this case any more."

Councillor James Bowers said: "I don't think there will be any interference by the executive out of this end either."

FOR ANOTHER MEETING.

"The Governor's only statement is that he wishes it understood that no action has been taken in the Madeiros case," Secretary Herman MacDonald announced at the conclusion of the Council meeting.

However, Mr. McDonald intimated that some announcement might be made later in the day. He declared the members of the council will be obliged to hold themselves in readiness for another meeting.

Even though Governor Fuller takes no action on the petition for a reprieve, Madeiros will not be executed tonight, although he can legally be taken to the chair at any time after midnight.

Warden Hendry of the Charlestown State Prison, who is charged with the execution of all prisoners in this State, called at the Governor's office shortly after noon. He was told no decision had been reached on the reprieve.

"There will be no execution tonight, in any event," the warden announced.

Then the warden left for the prison, accompanied by Chairman Brooks.

If no further statement is forthcoming from the Governor's office, the warden will wire to New York tomorrow for the executioner and it is believed that in that event the execution will take place after midnight, tomorrow night.

MADEIROS IN PRAYER.

Meanwhile, Madeiros is spending most of his time in prayer in his cell in the death house at Charlestown.

Twice before Madeiros has been snatched from death at the last minute by order of the Governor. Today he felt another reprieve would come at the eleventh hour.

Father Murphy, the prison chaplain, visited the condemned man several times today and spent several hours with him in his cell. It is evident that the consolation given by the spiritual adviser is keeping Madeiros up. He is glad to have the priest spend as many hours as possible in the death house.

Madeiros has been a strange figure in the Sacco and Vanzetti case. While under sentence of death for slaying the Wrentham cashier, Madeiros made a "confession" in which he declared that he was a member of the gang that murdered Paymaster Parmenter and his guard in South Braintree, seven years ago.

Madeiros declared in this unusual document that Sacco and Vanzetti were not members of the gang and knew nothing of the crime.

Although this confession was rejected by Judge Webster Thayer as being spurious, Governor Fuller twice before reprieved Madeiros so that the confession could be fully investigated.

Attorney Thompson still believes the confession important and asked the Governor to save Madeiros' life pending such time as the fates of Sacco and Vanzetti are finally determined.

Madeiros' mother and sister from New Bedford have visited him for the last time, unless the Governor grants him a new lease of life. There are no other relatives to call at the death house. Another sister lives in California, while the same is a year ago, when Madeiros was first sentenced, but she will not return for another visit.

RECEIVES DEATH DECREE.

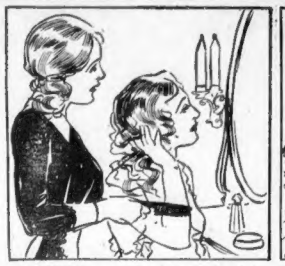
Governor Fuller today received his first official notice of the Sacco-Vanzetti death sentence. It was a certified copy forwarded to his office from the clerk of the courts at Dedham.

The usual number of petitions and letters dealing with the Sacco-Vanzetti case were received.

Rabbi Samuel Wolk, assistant to Rabbi Levy at Temple Israel, was among those who asked the Governor to intervene on behalf of the doomed men.

The Greater Boston Branch of the Unitarian Ministerial Union sent resolutions to the Governor, calling on him to appoint a commission to investigate the entire Sacco and Vanzetti case.

Bleak House — By Charles Dickens



FOLLOWING the death of Lady Dedlock dismissed her maid, Mlle. Hortense. It was suggested that she had a proud and vindictive nature, suspected something of the secret that connected Lady Dedlock with the mysterious Nemo.

Nemo, the clerk, her maid, Mlle. ON one of Esther's charitable visits to a sick woman in London she met Dr. Allan Woodcourt. They fell in love, but concealed their emotion because the doctor was too poor to marry him, and Esther agreed, thinking to please this he became a ship's surgeon and sailed away from England.

WHILE befriending Jo, the street sweeper, Esther contracted a dangerous fever. She recovered, but her face was marred by the disease. Old Mr. Jarndyce, out of sympathy, asked her to her benevolent guardian.

ONE day, while Esther was picking flowers in the woods, Lady Dedlock hastened toward her and poured out the secret of her heart—that Esther was her own daughter! Miss Barbary, Esther's, godmother, had been Lady Dedlock's sister.

'Let Governor Alone,' Is Plea in Lawyer's Book

A sweeping defense of the courts of Massachusetts, the hope that "wandering citizenry" will be led to confidence in our courts, and an urgent plea to "let the Governor alone" in the Sacco-Vanzetti case are contained in a booklet published today by Ethelbert V. Grabill, reporter of decisions for the Supreme Court, and a Boston attorney.

Entitled "Sacco and Vanzetti in the Scales of Justice," the booklet created interest in legal and lay circles. In a foreword, the author stated that his effort is solely to be of service to his fellowmen. Samuel Usher of the Fort Hill Press joined with him to share the expense of its publication, according to the foreword.

Mentioning those who would advise the Governor in his disposition of the case, the author says:

There are a great many people who are certain they can assist the Governor in his difficult task of solving the little knowledge of the intricate problem presented, but in such times the most gratuitously, being prompted either by partisanship for the murdered or convicted, or by a feeling that the Governor has not the sanity, integrity, intelligence or courage they possess.

VITUPERATION NOW.

"It is fortunate that violent methods, adopted on previous occasions following the verdict by partisans of the defendants here and abroad, to show their contempt for government, and physical threats to the Commonwealth's officers and witnesses, seem to have ceased. The only violence now is vituperation, and there seems to be cooperation on both sides of the fence.

"Mass meetings, however, are being held by the partisans of Sacco and Vanzetti, where crowds, who cannot possibly know the facts of this now intricate case, are taught by slogan methods carrying both disrespect for and destruction of the governmental authorities in their words, are incited by fiery oratory, and are led to threaten strikers, with all the possibilities of violence they entail.

"Previous to the trial, threats of personal violence had been made against the court, the prosecuting officers and others. Attempts to intimidate possible witnesses were indulged in. Violence against the established order and the proper conduct of the trial was so clearly threatened that strong precautionary measures had to be taken about the courthouse. It has been stated in argument by counsel for the defendants that these precautionary measures prejudiced the defendants in the eyes of the jury. In view of the charge given to the jury, which will be mentioned later, it would seem that the fear would not result in his acquitting the defendants so as to escape possible violence. The jurymen have stated that such incidents did not influence them.

THE CASE OF THAYER.

Referring to Judge Webster Thayer, who presided at the trial, the author says:

"He had no personal interest whatsoever in the outcome of the trial. Few men could be found with a keener realization of the degradation which would follow a perversion of his duties as a judge presiding at such a trial, and of the high honor which would result in the performance of those duties with vigor, integrity and justice."

It was the defendants who brought into the trial mention of radicalism, according to the author.

"The Commonwealth in no part of its case and through none of its witnesses put forth a single item of evidence to show that either of the defendants was a radical, a communist, an atheist, or opposed to our American institutions as a matter of belief or principle. This evidence the Commonwealth seemed studiously to avoid in the evidence it put forward in chief.

CALLS JUDGE FAIR.

Touching on the Judge's charge to the jury, the author goes on to say:

"For clearness, completeness and fairness, it probably never has been excelled. A reading of the entire charge as it appears in the printed record before the Supreme Judicial Court, pages 1137-1165, will be searched in vain for any indication of what the Judge thought as to guilt or innocence of the accused. Repeatedly the jury were told that they and they alone were to determine whom to believe and what weight to give to the evidence."

"VERDICT UNASSAILABLE."

That the defendants received a fair trial is clear by surveying the records of the case, he said. "They have had a most fair trial at the hands of the district attorney, his assistants, the judge and the jury and their own distinguished counsel, and the jury's verdict, so far as anything yet has appeared, is unassailable."

In conclusion, the author says: "Our Governor is fully capable of performing his whole duty of investigation and determination in the present case. When he has acted, no patriotic citizen should complain of his conclusion. Our overnor is a man of affairs, fully informed as to his duties and responsibilities, certainly not lacking in intelligence, nor industry, integrity or courage.

"Many persons of standing are urging the Governor to appoint a commission to do his investigating for him, and numerous petitions to that end are being circulated. Is this not presumptuous and harmful? Might it not fairly be considered presumptuous because it must be based upon one or two hypotheses: (1) either that the Governor does not know how or from where to get his facts and advice; or (2) that he cannot be relied on to act with intelligence, industry and courage in procuring facts, advice and counsel, but must have some other body not recognized by our Constitution or laws, upon whom he can shift his responsibility in case he acts upon their advice?

"Neither of these hypotheses has any basis whatever. It, moreover, would seem to be harmful to keep the strife alive by having persons passing around such petitions, or any petition on the subject; it tends to stir up opposition to our Constitution and laws, as was done at a New York mass meeting recently; and as in the case of the Smith College mass meeting presided over by the college president and addressed by professors—an odd use for education, which should teach poise and balanced, informed judgments. It urges persons, who cannot possibly, without great study, make themselves sufficiently acquainted with the situation, into action on the say of someone else, probably equally uninformed. It does not and cannot help the harassed Governor to perform the difficult task which must be all his own. Let the public calm down. The Governor can be fully trusted.

Out of Work, Hangs Himself

Ware, April 27 (A.P.)—Despondent because he was unable to find work, Frank Rudek, 40, hanged himself from a tree in Greenville Park. He leaves his wife and a child.

SHOOT MAN IN 'DOPE' RAID

eral authorities would be asked to explain failure to report.

"I know nothing about barring Medford policemen from the hospital," said Allen. "I gave no such orders.

"Gerardi, who previously served a six-months sentence for selling 40 ounces of morphine, gave us trouble the last time he was arrested and he did the same this time.

"He was one of our quarries in the biggest 'dope' cleanup in many years. The arrest of Dominico Izabella of Abbott street, Medford, last week, was another link in our chain. A Lawrence man was also apprehended last week and in the course of our roundup we have seized 19,725 grains of the drug, valued at $1 a grain.

CLAIM HE MADE BREAK.

"An ounce was purchased from Gerardi by an agent last Saturday. On Sunday he was to bring more, but he brought only three ounces, and as the arrest was not made, as planned. We wanted to get him with a larger quantity.

"Yesterday he was supposed to bring 30 ounces to the agent, whom he thought were pretty good customers. He showed up with a story that he had been double-crossed and he had only four ounces.

"This meeting took place in Medford by arrangement. The arrest was made and he made a break to escape, the shooting followed. The agents took him to the Boston hospital because they did not know the location of any hospital in Medford and wished to waste no time."

Patrolman Bradshaw of Medford saw the agents in the vicinity and was told they were United States officers and would handle the arrest alone. After the shooting he returned to the scene with another officer just after the government men and their prisoner sped away.

MOVIE "EXTRA" SLAIN AT DRINKING PARTY

Hollywood, Cal., April 27 (I.N.S.). A gay party here was suddenly turned into tragedy today when Tom Kerrick, 32, film "extra," was shot and killed in his apartment. The shots, according to police, were fired by one of his guests. The guests were all motion picture men.

While drinks were being poured according to the guests, Kerrick stood in the middle of the room. Two shots were suddenly fired and he fell dead. Henry Isibell and Iris Burns fled immediately after the shooting, other guests told the police. It was thought by the police that Isibell had gone for a doctor, but he did not return. The guests and Kerrick's wife are held by police for investigation.

TRYING TO STOP JALISCO REVOLT

Mexico City, April 27 (A.P.)—Determined to end rebellious activities in the State of Jalisco, the government was continuing today to concentrate Federal forces there.

It is reported that 4,000 cavalrymen are being moved to the state, and in circles close to the War Department it is stated that General Roberto Cruz, chief of police of the federal district, a staunch supporter of President Calles, will be appointed to command the forces in Jalisco, replacing General Jesus Ferreira.

PROBE PAST OF SLAIN MAN

Search today continues for the slayer of Teodor Chychuk, night man at the Puritan lunch at No. 280 Huntington avenue, Back Bay, killed while trying to protect the lunch from robbery.

Back Bay inspectors are carefully checking up the slain man's past. He showed a disposition to change his lodgings frequently, received numerous letters from relatives in Russia asking for money, was reported to be defendant in a pending law suit and other things, determined police to check his past.

Surface indications point to the slayer as a former employe of the cafe, and this man is sought for questioning.

"GIVE FLEET THE LAUGH!" SAYS ADMIRAL PLUNKETT

New York, April 27 (A.P.)—Stressing the need of a larger navy, Rear Admiral Charles P. Plunkett, commandant of the Third Naval District, told the members of the New York Society of Military and Naval Officers of the World War to "go down to the Hudson River and laugh at the fleet when it comes in Friday—and then go out and work for a bigger navy."

He said that when President Coolidge "has all the facts in connection with the naval armament before him, steps will be taken to have the United States build the largest navy in the world."

WRITES POLICE OF SUICIDE AND VANISHES

A letter, telling of the intended suicide of J. Raymond Cavanaugh of Hancock street, West End, set the police to watching the Charles River today for Cavanaugh's body.

Captain James McDevitt of the Joy street station received the letter, postmarked 10 a. m. yesterday and address "Police of the Joy Street Station."

It was signed "J. Raymond Cavanaugh, Hancock street" and read:

"I am unable to further continue work. The body you find in the Charles River is mine. I desire no funeral services. I also request that my body be turned over to the Harvard Medical School to do with as they see fit."

Police found Cavanaugh had left his room today at his usual time for work in a Massachusetts avenue, Cambridge, lunchroom, but had not reported for duty. A watch was posted at th river.

Cavanaugh formerly was an orderly in the Massachusetts General Hospital.

N. E. RAILROADS TARGETS FOR PLANES IN WAR GAME

New England railroads will be the target for "enemy" airplanes in the big war game to be played by land and naval forces along the entire North Atlantic coast the latter part of this week.

The bombing of the railroads will take place on Friday. The enemy planes will make a concerted assault along the entire New England and New Jersey coast, using the Statue of Liberty in New York harbor as a "landfall" to direct the fire from the hostile fleet over the horizon.

The object of the air attack will be to show easily real enemy planes could sweep in from the sea and cripple our transportation facilities.

MAKER OF WINTON CAR IS MARRIED SECRETLY

Cleveland, April 27 (A.P.).—The marriage yesterday of Miss Marion Campbell, Cleveland operatic composer, and Alexander Winton, pioneer automobile manufacturer and president of the Winton Motor Works, was revealed here today. The couple was married secretly at Covington, Ky.

MAYOR URGES KENMORE SQ. LEGISLATION

Mayor Nichols today urged Governor Fuller not to prorogue the Legislature until definite action is taken for the solution of the Governor square (Kenmore Station) transit and traffic problem.

In a letter to the Governor, he wrote:

"When it appeared certain that there was to be no rapid transit legislation enacted, I presented a new measure for the extension of the Boylston street subway at Governor square.

"I am sending you herewith a copy of this bill, and I trust that it will be possible for you to transmit to the Legislature at your earliest convenience message which will deal with this most important traffic problem.

"The act authorizing construction at Governor square has for two years been in existence, but has met with two main objections from the elevated. First, the road did not care to execute this lease until after control and management of the road had been determined.

"I do not believe that the comfort and convenience of our riders or the solution of such an important transit problem should be set aside for any such reason. Secondly, the road objected on the ground that additional burden might be placed upon our riders. This bill I have filed meets this objection."

$5,000,000 in "Gold or Liquor" Under Guard Here

Gold or liquor, or something said to be valued at $5,000,000 more or less, rolled into North Station in an American Express car today heavily guarded by members of the Secret Service.

The shipment came on Train No. 302 from Montreal, arriving at 7:40 o'clock. An American Express official explained it was a car commandeered by the government and that the way-bill was under guard of a Secret Service man.

The shipment was consigned to the Treasury Department at Washington and this fact gave rise to rumors that it was a shipment of gold or shipment of accumulated liquors which have been held in Vermont.

VETO OF JUDGES PAY UPHELD

By a roll-call vote of 112 to 108 the House today sustained Governor Fuller's veto of the $3,000 salary increases to judges of the Supreme, Superior and Land Courts.

The upholding was despite a scathing attack on the Governor and his veto message by Representative Hays of Brighton, who characterized the message as "arrogant."

"Its second part is pure and simple bunk," declared Hays, and he accused the overnor of "doing everything in his power to hold up the Legislature to public contempt and ridicule."

"I believe that great office has been dragged into the dirt as it never was before," said Hays, before being called to order by Speaker John C. Hull, who warned him about characterizing the Governor.

RAIL CLERKS IN PROTEST ON NEW HAVEN LAY-OFF

Discharged clerks of the New Haven Railroad have filed protests with the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks, it was learned today, as some of the men still in service denied the assertion of railroad officials that the railroad men being laid off are "the last ones hired in every instance." The clerks cited the discharges of 34 employes in the overcharge claim department, in which group were some workers with service dating from 1902, 1903 and 1910.

It is asserted by the railroad workers that the road is discharging older employes in many instances to dodge the pension system. The overcharge claim department, according to the clerks, will be moved to New Haven, although 75 per cent of its work concerns Greater Boston shippers.

KELLOGG NEVER HEARD OF CENTRAL AMERICAN 'PLOT'

Washington, April 27 (A.P.).—Secretary Kellogg issued a formal statement today declaring he had never heard of a policy on the part of the Harding administration of extending control over Central America. The statement was prompted by a Washington dispatch published today in the New York Times which said Mr. Hardingshad been quoted by friends as having said privately that it was the ambition of his administration to bring these nations under the Stars and Stripes.

AUTO CLUB FOR $3 FEE, LETTER TELLS FULLER

In a letter to Governor Fuller today, the Boston Automobile Club vigorously opposed any provision except the $3 registration fee as specified in the gasoline tax bill, declaring that it was the belief of the club that had the Governor conferred with representatives of auto clubs he would not have recommended an increase in the fee.

TWO HUB MEN BID FOR VICTORY PLANT LEASE

Washington, April 27.—Two Boston men were among the bidders for a lease on the Victory plant at Squantum, where destroyers were made during the war, it was revealed today when bids for the plant were opened. They are Samuel J. Wilde and John A. Sullivan. Both offered $60,000 a year.

IN THE HOME OF THE SCARF

Miss Penelope Sherman found the corner where scarfs are displayed in great array most interesting when she visited the newly opened addition to Jay's, Inc., women's and misses' apparel shop, No. 11 Temple place. Jay's has doubled first floor space by the addition.

Completion of the new street floor store marks another step in the growth of Jays Shop for Women. This new street floor store connects with the original store at No. 11 Temple place.

The new store doubles the first floor selling space and adds two display windows and another street entrance. Its furnishings consist of walnut cases and tables.

No new departments have been added, the new store giving expansion of space. Additional elevators will take patrons to three second floors where dresses are sold, and to the hat and sports suit departments on the third floor. The first floor continues with its scarfs, silkwares and novelties.

Papa Coolidge Didn't Raise Son John to Be a Fireman

Amherst, April 27.—John Coolidge, son of the President, did not turn out with other students to help firemen battle the flames which swept the Chase Block, burning ten families out of their homes.

John was not present at the last big fire either and students and residents alike are wondering if he has an aversion to fire-fighting.

Damage in the Chase Block was estimated at $40,000. Northampton sent fire apparatus to help battle the flames.

GIRL OF 8 TO APPEAR AT JORDAN HALL EVENT

Eight-year-old Marilyn Cobrain, talented acrobatic dancer, will be in one of the solos at Jordan Hall tonight, where Madam Papporella is giving her annual recital, "Coppolla."

Marilyn Cobrain

The girl's act is one of the features of the evening. She lives with her parents at No. 248 Warren street, Allston.

RED CROSS FLOOD FUND NOW TOTALS $2,546,800

Washington, April 27 (I.N.S.).—The sympathetic heart of America has poured $2,546,800 into the fund for the relief of flood sufferers in the Mississippi Valley, the American Red Cross announced here today.

This total contribution to date includes a $100,000 gift from the Red Cross. Of the remainder, Eastern States furnished $1,705,509. The goal of the drive is $5,000,000.

Mrs. Tousant Confirmed

The appointment of Mrs. Emma Tousant of Quincy to the industrial accident board, made a week ago by Governor Fuller, was confirmed today by the executive council.

Baker Orders Rush of More Planes and Boats

Memphis, April 27 (A.P.).—Far-reaching steps to save the lives of hundreds and to get the homeless to safety points were taken by Henry M. Baker, director of the Red Cross relief, today. Because of the terrible conditions in southeastern Arkansas, he ordered sixteen Coast Guard motor craft from Vicksburg to Arkansas City and they breasted the tide all night, so urgent was the call.

Additional seaplanes for reconnoitering and 100 motor launches from the Coast Guard have been called for, so that all of the stranded may be removed from levees.

DRIVER GETS SIX MONTHS IN JAIL

Six months in the house of correction and a $115 fine was the sentence imposed on Maurice F. Renton of Cambridge when found guilty in Middlesex Superior Court today o' drunken driving.

In lower court Renton had been fined $100 for drunken driving and $10 for being drunk. He appealed, and when trial started in Superior Court, Richard H. Lindsey of New Bedford came forward. He testified that on the night police arrested Renton for driving the auto, he, Lindsey, had been driving and had gone into a lunch room leaving Renton in the auto. Police called the lunchroom manager to combat his testimony. The manager said Lindsey was not in the lunch room and police convinced the jury that Renton was driving.

When the jury returned its verdict today, Assistant District Attorney Warren L. Bishop asked Judge Dillon for a bench warrant for the arrest of Lindsey. In issuing the warrant the judge said:

"This is one of the worst pieces of perjury I have seen in my 28 years on the bench."

He then sentenced Renton to six months and fined him $115.

"I am taking into consideration," he said, "the fact that the defendant's testimony was also perjury."

20-FOOT SWAN BOAT FOR DISABLED VETS

Disabled veterans of the Rutland State Hospital will be presented with a 20-foot swan boat by the State Auxiliary of the Veterans of Foreign Wars at a ceremony to be conducted on the shores of Swan Lake, Rutland, Sunday afternoon.

The presentation will be made by Anna J. Doherty, president of the auxiliary and May baskets, the gifts of the members, will be distributed to the 400 veteran patients. Senator David I. Walsh is scheduled to deliver an address.

WORCESTER TECH TO PLANT 1,000 TREES

Worcester, April 27 (A.P.).—Commemorating Arbor Day and carrying out the policy as presented by President Ralph Earle for developing the grounds at Worcester Polytechnic Institute, 500 undergraduates will plant 1,000 three-year-old red pines and Norway spruce on the institute premises Friday afternoon and Saturday.

FIREMAN DROPS DEAD ON INSPECTION TOUR

Engineer Frank H. Laskey of engine 11, East Boston, dropped dead today at Deer Island while making a tour of inspection with Peter E. Walsh, superintendent of the Boston Fire Prevention Bureau. The fireman was about 51 years old and had been connected with the fire department for a quarter century.

More Mackerel

Nearly 1,000,000 pounds of fresh mackerel are enroute to the Hub today from the southern mackerel fleet, according to advices received at the Fish Pier from Cape May, Atlantic City and New York, landing ports of the Massachusetts mackerel seiners.

N. E. BUSINESS IS SAFE, SAYS SEC. DAVIS

Pawtucket, R. I., April 27 (A.P.).—Secretary of Labor Davis, addressing a group of 100 business and industrial leaders here today, declared New England's industrial future is safe if she will keep pace with the changes of the times.

He said in part:

"New England has, and I am sure will continue to have, a great and glorious industrial history. The history of America is written about New England, and we are all proud of its noble traditions and historic background.

"New England has the capital, the mechanical equipment and intelligent workmen possessed of skill, initiative and ingenuity. Those things, combined with managing genius, will enable you to meet successfully all changing conditions in manufacture and business in general.

"When it becomes necessary to meet changing times, substitute new products for old ones and in this way New England will keep up her full volume of production. In the operation of your industries if you keep pace with the demands made by changing styles, textures and patterns, New England has nothing to fear. Don't be afraid to venture into new fields and your important position in the economic structure of America is assured."

AMHERST BOYS MAY NOW CUT CHURCH

Amherst, April 27 (A.P.).—A new system of chapel and church attendance at Amherst College which abolishes compulsory church attendance was adopted by the faculty at a meeting last night, it was announced today.

Chapel attendance is still required of undergraduates, but under a more liberal plan.

Under the new regulations Sunday morning church will be abolished and a Sunday afternoon chapel service from 5 to 5:30 o'clock will be held. Attendance at this service will count double, so that with the daily 15-minute chapel services there will be eight units of chapel a week.

Attendance of freshmen and sophomores will be required to average five of these units a week and upper classmen four. Church attendance at home or in Amherst may continue to be substituted for the college Sunday chapel.

While the new regulations go into effect in September, 1927, they will be retroactive for seniors during this term.

Under the rules in effect this year three cuts a term will be allowed from church attendance. Freshmen were allowed in addition one cut from daily chapel, while upper classmen were allowed two cuts weekly.

Emery Paper Spark Sets Boy on Fire, Dies of Burns

Holyoke, April 27 (A.P.).—Herbert Bissell, sixteen, died today in a hospital of burns suffered in a peculiar accident. With a chum, Otto Kleeburg, he was removing carbon from the engine of an automobile when the emery cloth used struck a spark which set fire to Bissell's oily clothes.

The flames communicated to Kleeburg's clothing and both boys ran from the garage.

Kleeburg extinguished his blazing clothes by rolling in the grass, but his companion continued to run and suffered fatal burns.

USES HATCHET ON WOMAN

A twice-wielded hatchet wounded his daughter-in-law and made James Gallucci, forty-five, of Stark avenue, Wakefield, a hatless and coatless fugitive today while police of Wakefield and adjoining communities started a hunt through the woods for him.

Gallucci is alleged to have hurled the hatchet at his stepson, Carmine Gambale, and then to have cut Gambale's wife, who interfered. Then Gallucci, without hat or coat, fled the house.

According to the police, he will be charged with attempted murder when caught.

BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON SOCIETY EVENTS

B. Nason Hamlin Acting as the "Master of Ceremonies" for Both the Fine Arts and Cotton Balls.

AS "MASTER OF CEREMONIES" THE SERVICES OF THAT POPULAR clubman and erstwhile polo player, B. Nason Hamlin, are ever in demand. As Announcer Extraordinary has this gentleman of the gifted tongue and facile wit been secured for both big dances of the late season, the Fine Arts Ball on Friday next and the Cotton Ball in May. And to say that he'll move things along with spirit and dash and hilarity is to but state the previous accomplishments of this popular man on similar occasions.

I UNDERSTAND, TOO, THAT MR. HAMLIN IS ROUNDING UP SOME OF HIS SMART sports confreres who will come to the Fine Arts Ball in one or two of the "groups" that promise to make much picturesqueness. They'll be probably the "Norfolk" and the "Dedham" Hunts, all brave and bright in hunting array. Everyone recalls how stunning were the Hunts' groups two years ago, at the Fine Arts Ball. So consequently everyone is expecting something equally fine this year.

THE MINUET, WITH ITS TINKLING NOTES AND MINCING STEPS, WILL BE done by some of the notable matrons of the Women's Republican Club, some lifting their voices in song from the balcony while others do the dance on the floor below. Costumes, bewilderingly gorgeous and rich, are reaching the state of last-stitch and last-fitting perfection. Holker Abbott, the Copley Society's genial auteur, is having arranged a handsome fancy dress outfit, but keeping its mode and material a deep secret.

IN ALL PROBABILITY THE FORTY MARSHALS, GORGEOUS IN bright blue and white (robes, turbans and sashes), will lead the grand march. The entire town was searched for exactly the proper shade of blue that retains its color and lustre beneath artificial light. And much thought and time has been put into designing and creating their costumes. Miss Nellie Thompson, the artist, has had a hand in this. And all these young men, led by Leighton Rollins, will be most noticeable in the pageantry of the evening.

OF DINNERS BEFORE THE BALL THERE ARE NO END. "Everyone" gives a dinner or "everyone" goes to one. Mrs. Henry Lowell Mason, who has charge of the boxes, entertains at dinner and then takes her guests on to the ball. Mrs. I. Tucker Burr is entertaining. So also are Mrs. George P. Denny, Mrs. Gorham Brooks, Mrs. Joseph Courtney, Mrs. Louis E. Vose and Mrs. Benjamin F. Pitman, who is just back from a South American cruise. Mrs. Pitman's group is to be in Chinese costumes, so one may expect rare and beautiful embroidered satins of Imperial splendor on her guests.

IN EVER SO MANY WAYS MAY "AFTERNOON TEA" BE GLORIFIED to an occasion. Such were three teas of yesterday, each delightfully informal and each dressed up to delight its own particular group. First there was the Lowthorpe affair, at the Academy of Arts and Sciences in Newbury street. Then there was the Repertory Club's jolly meeting, progressing from an hour dedicated to business through Shakespearean bits, done by the Repertory players, and ending with tea about the snapping, cheerful open fire in the enormous fireplace of the reception room.

THIRDLY, THERE WAS THE CHARLOTTE CUSHMAN CLUB'S tea—with dancing. Just the sort of occasion to bring out Society folk to mingle with stars of the stage just now shining lustrously in the local firmament. As the initial Cushman Club tea-dance, it wrote itself down in social lore as distinctly jolly and successful. Mrs. Eliot Wadsworth was there, very attractive in black, a shoulder sash swinging jauntily and held by a gardenia cluster. Mrs. Walter C. Bayliss was another important Smart Set matron, her costume essentially of the spring mode, in beige.

MRS. JUDD DEWEY, DECORATIVE AS ALWAYS, WORE A LARGE black hat with her frock of satin, as she served in the "Tavern," as one of the Repertory retreats is called. Of course, there was a flock of the young girls on hand for the Repertory tea, those who are so supremely interested in the Repertory Club's future—Miss Elizabeth Estes, Miss Nancy Vose, Miss Georgia White and several others.

MRS. STEPHEN V. R. CROSBY, in printed crepe combined smartly with navy blue, was an enthusiastic "Lowthorpe" visitor. Mrs. Stephen B. Davol, leader of the Lowthorpe forces, is delighted with the interest and enthusiasm with which the Lowthorpe exhibition is being received. Three "garden" days planned for Groton will keep the spring interest at height, and then there are many other plans Lowthorpe potentates have in mind in the interest of the school and its much-wished-for endowment. Lowthorpe will be in its early glory a May, and it's just a short motor run to view its beauties.

TWO PRETTY YOUNG GIRLS WHO DANCED AT MISS ELEANOR Drinkwater's Bon Voyage party for the Misses De Pierrefeu were Miss Margaret Wentworth and Miss Esther Gardner. Miss Wentworth's rothy net, traced in silver, and Miss Gardner's green moire frock, sophistication itself, made lovely sartorial effects in the candle-lighted lance. The Misses Dolores and Leonora de Pierrefeu sail Saturday or a long period of travel and study on the other side.

supposedly impregnable city whose foolish merchants had spread bullock hides on the outer walls to show derision for the tanner's grandson. William had the leading citizens skinned and their hides hung on the same walls. A warning to respect his mother. In our day, a dutiful son endows a hospital ward or an orphan asylum, a far better way to honor your mother.

IN MEXICAN rebel regions President Calles has warned law-abiding populations to concentrate in fifteen designated places in the next ten days. After that the whole territory will be bombed by two full squads of airplanes, destroying towns and villages over the rebel areas. Much as we deplore wholesale killing, our War Department should have observers keeping track of the process.

GLADWYN NICHOLS, handsome, earnest band leader of Aimee McPherson's temple in Los Angeles, has quit, taking the band, choir and some of the congregation to a large tent. He promises high-grade religion.

TROUBLE BEGAN, it seems, when Mrs. McPherson had her hair bobbed. That bob was too "worldly" for the good Mr. Nichols. Mrs. McPherson, who says: "It is just one of those things," explains that she had her hair cut to keep it from falling out, and will go right ahead saving souls at a rate to surprise you.

OIL UNDERGROUND is a great asset of this entire nation. The government should protect it, regulating prices when they tend to wastefulness. Our daily production of petroleum last week was 2,452,000 barrels, or 17,164,000 barrels for the week, nearly double the same week one year ago.

MOANING will come too late when the oil supply shall have been squandered because of its cheapness and Americans find themselves paying 60 to 75 cents a gallon for gasoline, as is done in many places abroad. Oil supply and gasoline interests all citizens. And what effects all citizens is the government's business.

JEROME J. JEROME says the stage is descending toward the bottomless pit to indecency. The "big theatres, which must please the mob in order to pay expenses, are the cause," says he. The size of theatres has nothing to do with it. American moving picture houses, in which you could lose any British theatre, run decent pictures, because producers and exhibitors have brains enough to know that in the long run decency pays, and Will Hays, chosen by them as censor, does his work well.

SOME ONE not satisfied with the "Star Spangled Banner" offered $1,500 for a better National tune. Nine hundred and fifty-one composers tried and failed. The "Star Spangled Banner" will continue to make Americans stand up. To do a thing well you must get excited about it. Socrates, greatest Greek teacher of oratory, said, "To convince others, be yourself convinced." There will be no improved "Star Spangled Banner" until real danger inspires somebody to produce the right song.

MRS. WILLIAM FILENE DEAD, AGED 93

After an illness of less than a month, Mrs. William Filene, mother of Edward A. and of A. Lincoln Filene, died at her home, No. 336 Beacon State road, today. She was 93 years old on December 12 last. Her sons were at her bedside when death came. She is survived also by seven grandchildren and ten great-grandchildren.

She was born in Germany and came to this country when a young woman. Her marriage to the late William Filene took place in Brooklyn in 1858. When her husband started a chain of small stores in New York, Salem, Boston, Lynn and Bath, Me., she was his active partner and stayed in the business with him until he retired in 1890. At that time her sons took over the business.

PAID ANNUAL VISIT.

From then on she always took interest in the Boston store, and even during the last few years has paid an annual visit to see her friends among the employes there.

On her birthday in 1924 the Filene Co-operative Association extended its congratulations to her in recognition of the interest shown in the association.

She had had four sons, two of them, Edward A. and A. Lincoln, now being president and treasurer, respectively, of the William Filene's Sons Company. The other two and a daughter, Mrs. Emma Hilburn, are dead.

The grandchildren are Mrs. Ames R. Little of Wayland, a daughter of Mrs. Hilburn; Mrs. Frank E. Alle of Newtonville, daughter of Rudolph Filene; Mrs. Alvin E. Dodd of Washington, D. C., and Mrs. George Ladd of Brooklyn, daughters of A. Lincoln Filene, and William, Dorothy and Ruth, children of the late Bertram L. Filene. There are also ten great-grandchildren, Marjorie, Constance and Barbara Allen; Nell, Philip Mason, Ames R., Jr., and Edward Filene Little, George and Lincoln Filene Ladd and Joan Dodd.

RIOT IN LONDON OVER REVISED PRAYER BOOK

London, April 27 (I.N.S.).—Authorities of the Church of England were today making inquiries to establish the responsibility for the disorders which made it necessary for the Archbishop of Canterbury to call in the police to afford him protection from hecklers during the annual meeting of the Religious Tracts Society in Queens Hall.

Opponents of the revised prayer book termed it "the popish prayer book."

The police hustled the hecklers out of the hall as they shouted, "Take your money and go to Rome." Several women then joined in hurling epithets of "coward" and "traitor" at the archbishops and they, too, were ejected from the hall.

ATTY.-GEN. SARGENT CALLED TO SICK WIFE

Washington, April 27 (A.P.).—Attorney General Sargent was called to Ludlow, Vt., today by the sudden illness of Mrs. Sargent.

According to a message received at the Department of Justice, Mrs. Sargent's condition was not believed to be serious.

HEALTH DAY FOR HUB SCHOOLS

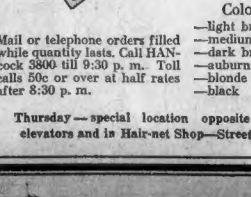
Boston public schools will observe Health Day Friday. In the 200 school buildings throughout the city special exercises will be held during the day, while in 17 different buildings Friday evening noted speakers will address parents and students on the advantages of maintaining health activities.

Health Day, nationally, will be observed Sunday, but Dr. John A. Cecconi, director of school hygiene, arranged the programs for Friday, believing that more parents and patrons could be interested.

United States Senator David I. Walsh, Mayor Nichols, former Mayors Fitzgerald and Curley, Dr. George B. Bigelow, Commissioner of Public Health of Massachusetts; Dr. Jeremiah E. Burke, superintendent of Boston schools, and other prominent educators and public officials will address the various meetings to be held Friday evening.

OLDEST "Y" MEMBER, 92, VISITS BRANCH IN HUB

George W. Merserve, 92 years young, and the oldest member of the Young Men's Christian Association in the world, was today a visitor at the Huntington avenue branch, where he was greeted by Arthur S. Johnson, president of the Boston Y. M. C. A., for 30 years. Mrs. Merserve accompanied her husband. She is 91. The couple live at No. 145 Warren street.



U. S. MINISTER IN CHINA FEARS NEW CRISIS

Peking, April 27 (I.N.S.).—American Minister John Van A. MacMurray today expressed concern that the increasing firing by Chinese against American and other warcraft in the Yangtse River might lead to a critical situation. He pointed out that a direct hit from one of the Chinese shore guns might sink one of the smaller gunboats.

MacMurray said that John K. Davis, American Consul at Nanking, is attempting to check American financial losses, but this is difficult as Davis has not been ashore since claims were levied upon the Chinese authorities for damages caused in the anti-foreign outbreaks.

Examination of Soviet account books which were seized when the Soviet embassy compound was raided has revealed that Soviet credits to the Southern (Nationalist) army totalled 10,500,000 rubles (normally $5,400,000) since the beginning of 1926. The books showed that the Russians had supplied the Southern army with munitions, rifles, mortars, railway rolling stock and flame throwers.

Washington, April 27 (A.P.)—Formal assurances from Eugene Chen, Nationalist foreign minister at Hankow, that his government has no policy of destroying foreign trade in China were transmitted to the State Department by Consul-General Frank P. Lockhart, who with a group of American business men in Hankow had conferred with Chen.

The conference occurred last Saturday and Lockhart transmitted a statement made public by Chen subsequently as to the matters discussed with the Americans.

CALLES AGREES ROAD TO PEACE IS OPEN

Mexico City, April 27 (A.P.)—President Calles believes that the road has now been opened for a satisfactory settlement of all difficulties between Mexico and the United States. He emphasized this in commenting on President Coolidge's New York speech.

"There is nothing more than a misunderstanding or divergence of judgment in appreciating a legal order, which really had not affected the legitimate interests nor, fortunately, injured the sentiment of the nations, nor brought any injury to our decorum," Calles said.

He has no desire that the Mexican-American controversy shall be settled by arbitration, saying, "It appears to us perfectly satisfactory that such settlement should be obtained by means of negotiations, which would have the advantage of not injuring the sovereignty of the country, as it would by submitting to arbitration difficulties emanating from our constitution and our laws.

"I think, as President Coolidge does," he said, "that there is a great desire to maintain cordial relations. It is not only possible, but easy to reach an amicable settlement, and, using Mr. Coolidge's own words, as carried by the newspapers, I believe that the two countries should comport themselves in such a way that their friendly relations are not impaired."

Asked his opinion relative to President Coolidge's mention of the origin of the difficulties with Mexico, President Calles declared:

"I believe he spoke of claims which over a long series of years were referred to as damages, either as regards American lives or property, which, due principally to revolutionary acts, have been, and will be, judged by general and special claims commissions which are functioning."

VANDERBILT MAINE ESTATE SOLD TO ATWATER KENT

Bar Harbor, Me., April 27 (A.P.)—Announcement was made here today of the sale to M. A. Atwater Kent of New York and Bar Harbor, of the Frederick K. Vanderbilt estate on Mount Desert Island. The house, built 25 years ago by Henry Lane Eno of New York, was sold in 1917 to the Lyman Kendalls, also of New York, who occupied it two seasons before it was sold to Mrs. Vanderbilt, who died in Paris a year ago.

CONTINENTAL CLOTHING AD WINS REVIEW AWARD

The Continental Clothing Company's Hart-Schaffner and Marx clothes advertisement was the winner of the fourth weekly period in the Prize Review of Current Advertising, conducted by the Boston Evening American and sponsored by the Advertising Club of Boston.

This advertisement, headlined "A New Primer of Spring Color for Men" and appearing in the Boston Evening American of Thursday, April 21, was selected by the Board of Judges as the outstanding merchandising message of the scores of excellent advertisements published in the Boston Evening American during the week ending Saturday, April 23. The Continental will receive a receipted bill for the cost of the winning advertisement.

This is the second of the Continental advertisements to be singled out for commendation. Another Continental-Hart Schaffner and Marx ad won honorable mention in the second week of the competition.

The "Primer of Spring Color" ad, reproduced in reduced size in today's paper, was a decisive winner. The judges believe it serves its purpose thoroughly and memorably. It sets out to attract the attention of the average man to the color of his clothing. It is good humored, good-looking, novel and ingenious.

The illustrations and typography attracted favorable comment from the judges. The drawings are quaint, youthful and playful in spirit, but quite informative withal. The typography is simple, easy to read, and especially well-proportioned and spaced.

It is not an easy thing to employ humor in advertising—or rather, it is too easy to employ humor; the difficulty lies in achieving a certain restraint, and in "sticking to business" while either poking or providing a little whimsical twist. The judges feel the winning ad to be an excellent illustration of the judicious use of humor in advertising.

The winning advertisement, by the way, was not designed especially for competition in the Prize Review, but was one of a series in a regular advertising program, aimed to call attention to color in men's clothes.

"We were indeed pleased to learn that one of our advertisements had been selected as the best appearing in the Boston Evening American last week," said Mr. John C. Nicodemus, advertising manager for the Continental's two Boston stores, and speaking also for Ernest F. Lovejoy the president of the company. "The Continental Company has always been a great believer in newspaper advertising as a method of reaching the buying public. Little did we think that when the 'copy' for this advertisement went out to the Boston Evening American office for publication that it would be voted the best for the entire week.

"We, in the Continental offices have been very much interested in the Boston Evening American's Prize Review of Current Advertising and its aims and purposes. It is, I believe, the first contest of its kind ever conducted by a Boston newspaper and deserves the attention of advertising men and advertisers.

"To any one who closely follows advertising it has been interesting to watch the change in the tone of advertising since your contest started. All the advertisements seem to have a more lively tone and indicate that the advertising men and copy writers have caught the spirit of the contest. To my mind the Boston Evening American, through this contest, is accomplishing what it set out to accomplish—better and more effective advertising."

The Continental ad was not without its rivals. Five ads were judged to be so good as to deserve Honorable Mention. These ads are listed in today's paper.

The Prize Review of Current Advertising is now in its fifth week. All advertising in each day's Boston Evening American and during the week is being reviewed by the Board of Judges, five expert advertising men appointed by Major P. F. O'Keefe, president of the Advertising Club of Boston.

The next winner will be announced in Wednesday's Boston Evening American, May 4.

Why risk unpleasant body odor

when this hygienic toilet soap purifies the pores—keeps you fresh

A BUSY day, a stuffy room, the embarrassing hint of body odor.

How quickly we notice it in others—yet often we may be guilty ourselves—and never know it.

For even in cool weather the pores constantly give off odor-causing waste. And thus body odor is a problem the year round—and it's so unpardonable.

Yet there's no excuse for risking body odor now. Just use Lifebuoy. Lifebuoy is so refreshing that it's a joy to bathe with it every day. It purifies pores—gives lasting freedom from body odor.

Those suffering from odor due to underarm perspiration or perspiring feet will especially welcome the purifying action of Lifebuoy's antiseptic lather.

So good for the complexion!

Lifebuoy is remarkably soothing and beneficial to the skin. Its purifying lather keeps complexions clear, fresh, satin-smooth. Millions use it for skin health alone.

But Lifebuoy is far more than just a fine toilet soap. Its penetrating, antiseptic lather removes germs as well as dirt. "Hands that look clean," warns the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., "may be covered with germs." Lifebuoy helps protect you and your family from the 27 germ diseases hands may spread.

Change toilet soaps—and see!

You'll like its clean hygienic scent

Lifebuoy is so different from other toilet and bath soaps that even its scent is different. Not a perfume, but a clean, pleasantly hygienic scent which tells you that Lifebuoy gives greater protection.

Even before you've finished your first cake, you'll learn to love this cleanest of all soap scents, which quickly evaporates after rinsing.

Without its antiseptic, Lifebuoy would still be a wonderful toilet soap—but you wouldn't get the added protection.

Added safety—no extra cost

Lifebuoy assures greater health protection, and freedom from body odor—yet costs no more, probably less, than the toilet soap you now use. Lifebuoy is orange-red, the color of its pure palm-and-cocoanut oils. You can get it wherever soap is sold.

ALL WORLD CAN HEAR U. S. NOW

Washington, April 27 (I.N.S.)—Authorization by the Federal Radio Commission of the high power for many broadcasting stations has placed the United States in possession of the most remarkable and far-reaching set-up of radio transmitters in the world.

When the commission's permanent plan is worked out in about six months, virtually every section of the earth will be able to "tune in on" some American station, experts asserted today. There's not a nook or corner of the United States too remote to be in almost nightly touch with the entertainment, business and political centres.

Eight stations with power of 12,500 watts or more have been authorized, they include:

WJZ, of Boston and Springfield, 30,000 watts; WJZ, of New York, 50,000 watts, owned by the Radio Corporation of America; WGY, of Schenectady, 25,000 watts, owned by the General Electric Company.

STUDENTS FOOL CITY AT DUKE OF YORK INITIATION

Melbourne, Australia, April 27 (A.P.)—Two university youths, dressed as the Duke and Duchess of York, motored through the streets of Melbourne today and so successfully impersonated the royal visitors that the crowds were completely hoodwinked and cheered them vociferously.

The stunt was part of the "ragging" during the Duke's initiation into the students' association after he had received the degree doctor of laws.

THIRD TERM?? TO BE IGNORED

Washington, April 27 (I.N.S.)—The first really serious effort to "smoke out" President Coolidge on the third term issue has come to naught.

Mr. Coolidge, it was announced at the White House today, will ignore the open letter addressed to him by a magazine, in which he was challenged to present his views to the country on the proposition that no President should attempt to continue in office beyond the traditional eight years established by George Washington.

The challenging letter was written by John Carter of New York and was designed to give Mr. Coolidge an opportunity to present his views to the country in the same manner that Governor Smith recently defined his views.

500 N. E. NURSES ATTEND PROVIDENCE CONVENTION

Providence, April 27 (A.P.)—More than 500 nurses met here today for the three-day convention of the New England division of the American Nurses' Association.

Annie W. Goodrich, dean of the school of nursing, Yale University, speaks on "Furthering the Creation of Central Schools" and Janet Geisler, director at headquarters of the American Nurses' Association, on "Private Duty Nursing." May Ayres Burgess gave the report of a committee appointed to study grading schools of nursing.

URGES PASTORS TO BROOD OVER SERMONS

New Haven, Ct., April 27 (A.P.)—Brooding is essential to a good sermon, Rev. J. R. F. Schter of Toronto, said today in the Lyman Beecher lectures on preaching, delivered at the convocation of the Yale Divinity School.

The sermon should be prepared early in the week, by Monday if possible, he said, and the remainder of the week given over largely to brooding over it. He described in detail the steps desirable in the preparation of the sermon, in order that it might be delivered most effectively.

Demand Halt on Tip 'Decoys' to Shame Banquet Patrons

New York, April 27 (A.P.)—Decoys for the purpose of luring folks at banquets into lavish tipping will be abolished if 104 associations which hold conventions in this city have their way.

They have framed demands on hotels that waiters and restroom attendants cease pulling quarters on bare collection plates to shame patrons.

NAB FUGITIVE AS ROBBER

John Gezzi of Hillsdale road, West Roxbury, arrested today on a charge of breaking and entering a Dorchester home, was identified later in the day at police headquarters as a fugitive from the Concord Reformatory.

The man was arrested by Special Officer Leonard O'Connell and Patrolman Hugh Brady charged with breaking into a dwelling house at 8 Sumner terrace, and with the larceny of clothing and jewelry to the value of $900. He will be arraigned in Dorchester court tomorrow.

To Cross Sea in Speed Boat

Rome, April 27.—In a boat 82 feet long that moves half submerged, Ettore Bugatti, automobile builder, will try to cross the Atlantic. He hopes to make it in 50 hours. The boat's maximum speed is 62 miles an hour.

RADIO DIALOG by C. WILLIAM RADIO

LADEN with radio stations as well as moisture, the evening's air afforded considerable contentment last night. Like the good old days, WJZ, WPG, KDKA and others roared in with no regard for our neighbors who wished to sleep.

Static was present, but we did not even hear any until we had been listening for an hour.

Set the dial at WPG and we heard the news flashes. This station was so loud that we are sure some of our neighbors also heard the news.

But the best thing we liked about the air was the manner in which the signals behaved. There was none of that half-hearted, will-he-wont-he attitude about them.

WIOD, WWRL, WBAL, WHFC, Chicago; WBBC, Brooklyn; WHK, Cleveland; WGBS, WJZ, WNCA, WEAF, New York; WGY, Schenectady; WCAU, Philadelphia, were among those present.

* * *

If you cannot get distant stations, why not use a "DX Hound"? This is an uncommon breed of dog and little is known about its training or habits. Maybe it drinks only distilled water and needs a trickle charge at night. If you have greased the antenna wire, let some fresh air into the tubes and polished the cabinet with no results, a radio DX Hound is needed.

Salient Points of the Bidding

North's initial pass and subsequent assist of his partner's Heart bid clearly show normal Heart support, that is, at least three cards of the suit. Consequently, his later bid of three Diamonds rather than a second assist in Hearts does not deny holding three Hearts, but does emphatically deny holding more than three, thus providing for the contingency that South bid originally with but four Hearts. South reading correctly his partner's bid, and holding five Hearts, returns to the Heart suit. When South's three Heart bid is overcalled by West's three Spades, North gives his partner another Heart assist.

Salient Points of the Play

Trick 2. As Dummy held a singleton Spade, East must shift to another suit. As between Clubs and trumps (Diamonds being barred by Dummy's Major tenace), East decides on a trump lead, having regard for the principle that the strong of a side suit, whether by [illegible] or adversary, usually costs [illegible].

Trick 3. East's failure to rebid, [illegible] twice passed by his partner, marks West with high side [illegible], and makes it reasonable to [illegible] that West holds the King [illegible], as well as a Club [illegible]. An attempt to establish the [illegible] suits at once would involve [illegible] of the trumps, and this [illegible] be avoided because of South's [illegible] Spades for which Dummy holds trump protection. If the Club suit can be established in Dummy and after its establishment a Diamond finesse holds, a losing Spade can readily be discarded on Dummy's eight of Clubs. South, therefore, leads a Club as the initial step towards the establishment of that suit. A Spade ruff cannot be taken at this stage, as there would be no way to get back to South's hand to start the Clubs, without taking the last trump from Dummy.

RADCLIFFE GRAD IS ACCUSER

Former Virginia Dodge Brings Charges Against Baltimore Detective

Baltimore, April 27.—Mrs. George Ransome Taylor, who as Virginia K. Dodge of Commonwealth avenue, Boston, was a leader of the younger society set there are well as the founder of the Radcliffe College Riding Club, is centre here of a sensational charge against a city detective, who, she charges, beat her and kicked her in the stomach.

Mrs. Taylor, whose husband is a direct descendant of President Zachary Taylor, conducts a society night club here. L'Foyer Francais, and her accusations against the detective all hinge about the exclusive club and the conduct of the son of a local judge at its doors.

ADMITTANCE DENIED.

This young man, said the Boston girl, whose father is Dr. Irving Perry Dodge of the Commonwealth Avenue Hospital, Boston, tried to gain admittance to the club, but was denied as he was not a member. He remonstrated, and Mrs. Taylor, she charges, went outside to call a policeman. She saw three men in plain clothes outside. They showed police badges, and then insulted her, she charges.

They followed her inside and proceeded to beat the judge's son, according to the society girl's story. She remonstrated, and one detective struck her on the head, while another hit her in the stomach. She fell, she said, into the arms of her husband, who also was beaten by the police, according to the charges.

COUPLE ELOPED.

The husband figured with the pretty Commonwealth avenue girl in a sensational elopement in Boston in 1924, when he was a student at Technology, and a student at Radcliffe.

At the time Boston society folks were preparing for the wedding of pretty Virginia Dodge and Count D'Ormido, who claimed to be of the family of Napoleon III.

But she jilted the count almost at the church door, and eloped with the Tech student.

Mrs. George Ransome Taylor, the former Virginia Dodge, Boston society girl and Radcliffe graduate, charges that a Baltimore detective kicked her and beat her in her exclusive Baltimore night club.

Veto Made Up of Misleading and False Information Is Charge

A new onslaught was made today by Motor Vehicle Registrar Frank A. Goodwin on Governor Fuller, who yesterday vetoed the Goodwin-actuated bill to increase salaries of State employes.

"Misleading and false information" is what the registrar's veto message to the Legislature is made up of, Goodwin charges in answer to the Governor's characterization of the bill as an "unseemly salary grabbing bill."

"He is incorrect, as he usually is," Goodwin asserted in one part of his statement, following an ironic reference to certain literary and historic quotations recently issued by Governor Fuller as part of proclamations.

"The veto message of Fuller on the salary bill is made up of misleading and false information that has been peddled around by Howard (Charles P., Howard, chairman of the Commission on Administration and Finance)," said Goodwin.

"I offered to meet Howard in the Governor's presence to discuss those statements, but apparently His Excellency preferred to be misinformed.

"When the Governor says he cannot hope, nor shall I attempt, to answer the misleading and false statements with which the public and the Legislature have been flooded, he is talking about statements I have made.

"But before I give out a statement I usually verify it, whether it is quoting Shakespeare or expressing an opinion on who was responsible for shooting them in the whites of the eyes.

"The Governor said there were 150 amendments made to the Garfield-Hurley bill. He is incorrect, as he usually is.

"Last year the Governor promised the State employes justice. He had a resolve passed for an investigation to be completed by December 1. It was made. Recommendations were sent to him and the Legislature last January. Kept these recommendations in his desk over since and the report has had no effect. However—

"I am sure the taxpayers of Massachusetts want to do justice to their public servants. They are grossly underpaid. Delirium lingered in her mind, making impossible any immediate decision of a matrimonial question.

Apart from the instinctive demands of the unfamiliar and vigorous desires that had carried her palpitatingly to the verge of an acceptance of his proposal, only the ingrained streak of caution in her nature had forestalled her.

Yet she had not been wizardly in responding to the aroused glamor of emotions. If the outer bulwarks of her instinctive feminine defenses had fallen, Jacqueline now realised a deep satisfaction that she had maintained at all times a perfect control that was never threatened. She was able now, to think of Tom Ware severely; to his credit she recalled that there had been no gross

A Startling Serial Story of Love, Terror and the Night Clubs

Jacqueline Kay, nineteen and attractive, comes to Boston from Houlton, Me., and obtains an engagement as singer at the Sea Shell, a cabaret. The proprietor, Julius Lupino, takes more than a friendly interest in her. She meets Tom Ware, who is informed by Lupino that Jacqueline is under his personal care. Lupino accompanying her home, she is accosted by a man, whom Lupino kills. The man is known as "The Lump," a criminal. Lupino is arrested and admits killing the man. Jacqueline leaves the Sea Shell, but is persuaded by Abe Gordon, Lupino's lawyer, to return. She does so and Lupino is released on bail. Ware warns Jacqueline against Lupino. Lupino tells the girl that he is ready to back her in a show, thus giving her her big chance. Jacqueline receives a note from Ware asking her to breakfast with him. She accepts.

Lupino tells Jacqueline that he knows of her breakfast with Ware. Admitting Ware is a nice boy, Lupino voices the hope that nothing will happen to him. Jacqueline realizes that Lupino has been spying on her.

Ware takes Jacqueline home. She invites him to breakfast in her apartment at noon the next day.

Ware confesses his love for Jacqueline and asks her to marry him. Jacqueline declines because she wants a career. She realizes that she is head over heels in love with Tom Ware.

Lupino notices the girl's happiness. She tells him she is in love with Tom. Lupino asks her to marry him instead. She refuses. He tells her that if he can't have her, no one else shall ever have her.

CHAPTER 20

After Tom had gone—Jacqueline had made him leave at two o'clock—she remained in the confused state of having evaded an answer to his proposal of marriage.

An explanation of this rested, perhaps, in the fact that there had been a kind of intoxication for both of them in the liberation of mutual emotions, breaking the bonds of repression. Jacqueline had sent Tom away because she shrank, somehow, from the too stirring excitement—for the present—of his upsetting nearness.

Even after he had gone, her lips still tingled with the kisses; her body had a crushed feeling of embraces that mounted almost to

700,000 IN N.Y. MAY STRIKE

New York, April 27 (A.P.)—A lockout order affecting 10,000 plumbers and their helpers in all five boroughs will go into effect at the close of work today, C. G. Norman, head of the Building trades employers, announced today.

If the lockout continues for a month, he said, it will throw 700,000 workers in the building trades out of work and almost tie up the city's $1,000,000,000 building program.

Terror of Death Chair Faces Boy, Only 16

Jefferson, O., April 27 (I.N.S.)—If the death sentence, imposed yesterday upon 16-year-old Floyd Hewitt for murder, is carried out on August 10, the date set by the court, he will be the youngest victim ever sent to the electric chair in the Ohio State penitentiary.

Young Hewitt, a Conneaut school-boy, was found guilty of the murder of five-year-old Fred Brown. He had been indicted for both the murder of the boy and his mother, Mrs. Fred Brown. The State charged that Hewitt killed Mrs. Brown in her home after she had spurned his advances.

On trial the youthful prisoner repudiated his confession, insisting that at the time he signed it he was mentally incapable of knowing what he was doing.

The Red Signal — Forebearings — By Homer Banks

ROGER TRAILS ROSALIND.—The past three days had not improved Roger's well being. He had been unable to work or sleep. Saturday, the day of the wedding, had arrived, and still no word from the mysterious Helen. His only hope lay in the private detective Helen had retained. Perhaps he had found a clue. Wearily he sank his head in his arms. Then he straightened, electrified. Why hadn't he thought of it before? Manton's apartment. That was it.

THE WEDDING PARTY.—Samuel Manton had not erred. His guests had been selected with taste and discrimination; the wedding party gave every promise of being a resplendent success to all—except Rosalind. Twice while dressing she felt on the verge of fainting, but the watchful maid administered smelling salts. There was a gasp when she finally emerged to be introduced. Manton was proud to exhibit her. Men gasped in admiration, the women's eyes glittered.

ROSALIND FACES REALITY.—But Rosalind was terribly unhappy. Was this marriage the sacred ceremony to which she had always looked forward? Was she following her heart? Samuel Manton had been very kind and thoughtful. He was, she felt, a good man, beloved by the people with whom he came in contact. And yet? A shaft of pain shot through her heart as she thought of Roger. But it was too late now. The clergyman had arrived.

NEGRO ELECTED CAPTAIN OF CHICAGO NET TEAM

The Biggest Moment in My Biggest Fight

By EDDIE ANDERSON,

Contender for Junior Lightweight Title.

THE first year is always a tough one for the young boxer. He is gaining experience in a difficult school, and with rough tuskmasters.

I should think that many ringmen would find the biggest moments of their lives some time in that period. I know that mine came then.

Back in 1921, I made my debut in the fistic game. It was not a quick way with me, but I improved by natural ways, and late in the season I performed in a ten-round six-ounce affair with Mickey Smith at the Dedham Boat Club. Up to the time of my opponent's collapse I was not very sure of myself. I was first, and only, when the knockout blow landed. Then I was positive that I had won the fight. I was so elated, naturally, that I went home and told my folks about it. At that time I was not thinking about my future. I was just glad that I had won a fight. I was not concerned with the fact that I would be paid for my work. I was just glad that I had won a fight.

Then I decided I would like to be a professional boxer. I made up my mind that I would be a professional boxer. I would be a professional boxer. I would be a professional boxer.

BRITONS TO RUN BUT ONE RELAY

Cambridge Athletes Led by Lord Burghley, Will Enter Other Events at Penn Meet

The Cambridge University track team, consisting of five members headed by Lord David Burghley, will compete, it has been announced, in only one relay at the Penn relays this week-end. The individual members of the quintet, however, will enter several separate events.

The British personal is Lord Burghley, captain; T. C. Livingstone-Learmonth; J. F. Richardson; D. C. Weightman-Smith and H. P. Bowles.

Lord Burghley told interviewers that the British relay team was entered only in the sprint hurdle relay. Richardson is the only member for this team, the other four being starters.

In the 400-meter hurdles Lord Burghley, who won the event in 1925, and Livingstone-Learmouth will compete. Weightman-Smith is a javelin thrower, and all five are hurdlers, in addition to their other accomplishments, and expect to enter the 120-yard hurdle relay.

CANADIANS ARRIVE

Of the five, Weightman Smith, who hails from South Africa, is the only man not a native Englishman.

Delta Collegiate Institute of Hamilton, Ontario, sent a team of four men, which numbered itself among the early arrivals at Philadelphia.

Yale, it is announced, intends to be represented by no less than five teams in this year's carnival. Head Coach George Connors gave out the makeup of these outfits, two of which will be defending champions.

The half-mile varsity relay team and the freshman one-mile team collected first places at last year's games. The former is, this season, without the services of the brilliant 1926 captain, Bayes Norton, and he will be missed.

Two men, however, will attempt to offset Norton's loss. Captain Paulsen, who has done the 440 in 48 7-10 seconds, and Ross, the national champion at 300 yards, will be on this quartet.

MUCH EXPECTED OF CARR.

The man counted upon to bring the most honor to Old Eli this season is Robin Carr, the champion pole vaulter of the world indoors. He is expected to do 14 feet in his first outdoor meet.

Last week he barely grazed the barr off the supports on two occasions at 14 feet and the coaches at New Haven have great confidence in his ability to shatter all existing pole vaulting records.

The Yale men who will go to Philadelphia for the relays are:

Half-mile and mile relay—Captain Paulsen, Ross, Paxton, Schurman, Watson. Two-mile relay—Hogan Watson, McIlheffey, Berger, Mac Smith. Freshman mile relay—Encs Thompson, Smith, Clayton. Gli Four-mile relay—Mac Smith, Briggs Berger, Evans, Hays. Pole vault—Robin Carr, Sturdy, Pond. Javelin—Davidson, Robbins, Dean. 120-yard high hurdles and shuttle relay—Trumbull, Edwards, Grams, Wood Sheldon. Hammer throw—Woods Cutle. Discus—Bradley, Brandenburg.

B. U. NINE PLAYS LOWELL TEXTILE

Boston University nine will complete the hardest part of its schedule in the next four days. The Terrier ball tossers face Lowell Textile School today, Northeastern tomorrow, and Boston College Saturday.

The tilt with Lowell Textile today should result in an easy victory for Coach "Chippie" Gaw's pupils. The game will be played at Lowell.

The Textile boys were swamped by Tufts and Northeastern. The "Terriers," on the other hand, were just tossed out by Tufts and have three victories to their credit, while the Lowell nine has yet to win a game.

Coach Gaw will use Larry Kelley, his third string pitcher, against the Lowell boys. He intends to use Norman George against Northeastern tomorrow, and Don MacDonald against the Eagles.

George will receive an acid test when he faces Northeastern. Don MacDonald, the twirling ace, could only nose out a three to two win.

If he comes through with a win he will take a regular turn in the box. MacDonald will be held in reserve. If the going is tough Don will finish the game.

MacDonald, with a week's rest, should be in fine shape against Boston College.

After these games the team will enjoy a much-needed rest.

RUN YON Says—

"THE Alarm Clock of the Heavies" is the way they bill Mr. Ben Found of Florida, one of the very latest editions of the pugilistic pachyderm, and he wears into the ring a bathrobe with a Big Ben alarm clock embroidered on the back.

You might suspect that Big Ben is a walking advertisement for the clock makers—a sort of pugilistic sandwich man—but I am keen to understand that this is not the case. The alarm clock on his back is set to wake him up at the count of nine. It is not altogether a bad idea, at that. I can think of a lot of heavies who might use an alarm clock to good advantage.

Big Ben Found is a student at Rollins College, which makes him a brother of some kind to Mr. Rex Beach, the eminent novelist. Mr. Beach is an alumnus of Rollins, and I hope and trust that Big Ben has some of Mr. Beach's vitality and wallop. If so, he may go far among the heavyweights.

I believe Florida claims Big Ben as her own, and I regret to dispel the illusions of the grapefruit growers on that score. In the interests of truth I must report, however, that Big Ben is a New Yorker.

He started his boxing career as a sparring partner for Andy di Vodi, the welterweight, who was battened by Mushy Callahan not long ago.

IT is said that Big Ben accepts no pay for his pugilistic endeavors and thus retains standing as an amateur. I do not see how it can be as he battles professionals but then there are a lot of angles to amateurism that are beyond me. Anyway, Big Ben is a strictly nonunion among the professionals.

He is managed by Jim Downing, of Salt Lake City, Utah, a former boxer, who was getting through about the time Mr. Jack Dempsey started his clamber to fame out Utah way. Jim has been doing some promoting in Florida besides handling Big Ben Found.

I have before me Big Ben's record to date, and it would indicate that he hates to dally in the ring. He smacks his opponents the minute he crawls through the ropes, no bout in which he has been engaged having gone three minutes. Let us hope the Big Ben does not display the same aversion to remaining in the ring when he himself gets smacked. Take a peek at his record:

Buddy Brown, K. O., 50 seconds.
Joe Gorman, K. O., 1 minute 30 seconds.
Andy Anderson, K. O., 1 minute 12 seconds.
Joe Kennedy, 1 minute 30 seconds.
Han Guyer, 40 seconds.
K. O. Brennan, 1 minute.
Joe Burke, 2 minutes.

TRUE, some of these opponents are of the genus pop-over, or hit-out, as we say, and Big Ben has yet to meet a real test. None the less, he would seem to have something besides the alarm clock on his back, and be at least brings a new and perhaps interesting face to the heavyweight division.

Bayonne Heavy Also Impresses

His record is not quite as impressive as that of Roy Hoot Burger, the big Kansan I mentioned in this column recently, or of Ernie Schaaf, the blond destroyer from the Navy, but give Big Ben time—or rather I should say give Jim Downing time. From the caliber of Big Ben's opponents, I would say that Jim knows what he is doing.

Found, Burger, Schaaf, Armand Emanuel, the San Francisco flash, and Wyoming Warner, the Snake River cowboy, are all about in the same class just now in the matter of experience and pugilistic promise, but I repeat what I said the other day—one or more of these fellows may be a sensation in the next year.

I SAW another heavyweight not long ago who impresses me no little—a young fellow who is more advanced than any of those I have named. He is Harold Maye, of Bayonne, N. J., the home of Jeff Smith the famous old globe trotter of Fistiana. In physical build and pugilistic style, Maye strongly resembles Jimmy Maloney, of Boston.

There will be no dearth of heavyweight contenders even if all those now pugilistically prominent pass from view.

B. C. ENTERS 5 TEAMS IN PENN RELAY MEET

Boston College will be well represented in the Penn Relay games with five Eagle relay teams and George Wilnowski in the decathlon entered. Coach Ryder hopes to make the best showing since Boston College has been competing in the annual carnival.

B. C. is practically assured of the two-mile relay title. The quartet composed of Ingoldsby, McKillop, Daley and Captain Luke McCloskey was not defeated during the indoor season and won the Intercollegiate race in New York.

Ryder, in an effort to win at least two relay titles, has withdrawn Frank Hussey from the dash. He will run as leadoff man on both the 440 and 880 sprint relays. Hussey does not seem to have the punch to win a dash and the B. C. coach feels that if he can get his sprint relays off to a good lead, his boys will win their events.

The four-mile varsity team is still unsettled.

The fifth team, a freshman mile quartet, will be made up of J. Sullivan, Woodworth, Mulcahy and Foley.

Golf Notes

Down on the links of the Wollaston Golf Club, the first open tournament of the season starts today and will continue through tomorrow. Instead of its usual handicap medal play tournament, Wollaston is staging a handicap vs. par event, the contestants being allowed three-quarters of their State handicap, the strokes to be taken as they come on the card.

Mrs. E. H. Baker, Jr., of Southern, Mrs. D. M. Belcher of Northern and Miss Martha Brewer and Mrs. W. J. Hahnan of Central are the only players left in the N. G. A. field who have won four matches this Spring. Miss Harriot Curtis, Northern, Mrs. S. M. Fiston of the Country Club and Mrs. W. A. Webster of Brae Burn have clean slates, but they have only played in three matches.

One of the features and biggest surprises of the Quimet-McKenzie-Lapham-Lapham match at the Unicorn Country Club was the long drives which flew from Ray Lapham's club head. McKenzie is one of the longest hitters in the game, but young Lapham was out in front of both McKenzie and Quimet from most of the tees.

Although the Providence District team failed to break into the win column against Brae Burn, the shakeup worked out to the advantages of Mrs. Isobel Harris' team, for instead of being swamped as has been the case in the three previous matches, the Newton players were given a real scare, finally winning 5 and 4.

Mrs. H. E. Kenworthy and her daughter Virginia, who have not been playing up to their usual form, were out of the Providence lineup against Brae Burn, their places being awarded to Miss Margaret Gordon and Mrs. Gaskill, both of whom won their matches.

The fourth and youngest member of the McAndrews family has broken into the professional golf ranks. Bob Jr., will act as assistant to his brother Jock at the Nashua Country Club. Although not as well known as his brothers, Charlie and Jock, young Bob is a real golfer and like the other members of his family, will make the grade.

While playing with Harry S. McDevitt, the former Dartmouth football and baseball player, Joe Conway, and Rev. Fr. Murphy, Rev. Fr. David Waters had a 73 at Wollaston recently. So well was the prelate going that he decided to play in the first four-ball match at the Country Club.

BIG MUNN HERE FOR BOUT WITH M'PHERSON

Wayne Big Munn, University of Nebraska football and wrestling star, is in town today looking fit and ready for his finish match with Jack McPherson, Scotch champion, at the Grand Opera House tomorrow night.

In meeting McPherson he is tackling a real wrestler. Jack defeated Ed Strangler Lewis one fall here last season and proved to the fans he has the class. While not nearly as large as Munn, he is a big powerful fellow, weighing right at 220, and can be counted upon to make Munn do his best.

Abe Kaplan, Jewish champion, will meet Pat McGill, Irish champion, in another best two falls in three to win with a ninety minutes time limit.

Doc Karl Sarpolis will mix it up with Sam Skoraky of Chelsea in a one fall finish match. Sam has wrestled exceptionally well this season and is expected to make the Lithuanian champion go at top speed.

John Spellman, Brown University star, will tackle that sensational Russian wrestler, Ivan Ludlow, making four bouts in all.

Inside Golf

By CHESTER HORTON

In yesterday's pointer it was observed how you accomplish the natural stoop during the address, this being more a push-back of the weight through the hips than a downward dipping of the shoulders or the entire upper body. That is the way you stoop when you do it without thinking about it. More stoop than that is too much, and will cause you to tighten up and lift up with the body when the club seeks to get through. The club must have room to swing and when the body is too far bent down it must straighten up. When you do that you probably say you "lifted you head again." That isn't the trouble at all—the action thus made is the natural action; the body simply has to get out of the way. So be careful to get that initial position right. The method I have given is the natural, easy, graceful, rhythmic stoop.

PYLE PLANS 3,160-MILE FOOT RACE

$25,000 for Winner of Longest Marathon in History of World

By MARK KELLY.

Los Angeles, April 27.—The longest footrace in the world's history is the newest venture to be announced by Charles C. Pyle and his associates in sport speculation.

A "transcontinental run" of 3,160 miles, from Los Angeles to New York city, will be staged under the Pyle banner next February. It will start from the Los Angeles Coliseum and finish in the Yankee Stadium New York. It is expected that the run will consume ninety days. A longer period will be allowed if necessary.

Here are plans as they are now promulgated in "skeleton" form:

1—Any person can enter, but he must provide his own trainer and conform to the rules to be made later.

2—To the winner will be given $25,000 in cash by Pyle. Additional prizes aggregating another $25,000 will be furnished by Pyle. The promoter also announces that by arrangement with civic organizations along the route an additional $75,000 should easily be gathered.

3—Already there are seven agents in Europe and Asia recruiting long-distance runners for entrance in the run. Hugo Quist, former trainer of Nurmi, will be in charge of foreign entrants. Other agents are in Egypt, India, the Riff country and in Morocco, while a Mexican agent is being delegated this week.

"In case there are two routes as I now see it, I will try to take the one with the least elevation," said Pyle. "And I will try to take the very shortest route possible. The winner will have to average thirty-two miles a day and ought to be able to do so."

Pyle said he has been nursing the idea of a transcontinental foot race ever since he read of the feats of Arab and Indian runners in war time.

Wise Peter Foley Own Story of Race — Stopped for Ice Cream Crazy Like Fox

WISE PETER FOLEY PREFERRED ICE CREAM

THE authentic story of Peter Foley's 1927 Marathon has arrived. It's quite a yarn, most interesting of all that emerged from the long road race, with the exception of De Mar's surprising victory on his hypertrophied legs.

Peter writes his story, and its shows that the veteran plodder has much more sense than lots of critics ever gave him credit for. Here's a letter the old boy sent to Myles McSweeney of this staff, who gave him an advance story:

Nick Flatley

"Well, Myles, how about it? Greeting.

"The Old Man was sure off feed last Tuesday. It was a damn good day for ice cream, but poor for Marathon stuff. Professors may talk about mind over matter. But that is all bunk. I said to myself, Now, Peter, old boy, do your stuff just the same as if it was nice and cool. Did Pete do it? Not so you would notice it.

"Pete started out like a house afire, but Pete soon Petered out. Burned out in a mile and one-half. After that it was a case of walk and roast, and not roast beef, either. Just stew, Irish stew, no trimming. Well, well. I should have started those two words with an H, for that's what it was.

"I did fairly well until just before I reached Natick Center I then allowed my mind to dwell on the delights of a nice vanilla ice cream. And the thought became a desire to connect with one and become friendly. So I cut out the hot stuff and forgot all about Marathon running and proceeded to make myself as happy and contented as a kid in swimming.

"It tasted like Nectar I've read about, the Nectar of the Gods stuff. Oh boy, was it good? Yum, yum, best ever. After I cooled down I called it a day and got aboard the boat. Watched quite a few of the weary plodders come along and said to myself, Pete, Old Scout, you're a damn sight better off where you are."

Peter, as we remarked, seems to be crazy like a fox. Takes a smart man to know when he's had enough.

National Amateur Ring Champions

115-Pound Class—Harry Liebenson, New York.
118-Pound Class—Thomas Paul, Buffalo.
126-Pound Class—Christopher Battino, Hartford.
135-Pound Class—Francis Burke, San Francisco.
141-Pound Class—Tom Lawn, New York.
158-Pound Class—Joe Hasden, New York.
175-Pound Class—George Hoffman, New York.
Heavyweight Class—Mike Mallory, San Francisco.

NEW YORK RING STARS WIN 4 TITLES

By RINGSIDE.

Although Boston boasts a fine array of professional fistic talent it must bow to New York and the Golden State in the amateur end of the game for this year at least.

Four New York battlers carried titles with them as they left the ring following the final battles in their classes at the National A. A. U. championships at the Arena. Two titles went to the Pacific slopes, while only one remains in New England. The other title was won by a lever representing Buffalo.

Christopher Battino of Hartford was the only one of the seven New England boxers left in the semi-finals to win a crown. However, Battino's win was impressive as he smeared his way to a one-round knockout over Louis New of Milwaukee in the 126-pounds class final.

LAWN WINS NEW CROWN.

Tom Lawn, flashy Tommy Lawn of New York, winner of the 135-pounds national title last year, came through in the 147-pounds division. He knocked out Jim Feeney of Portland in the third round of the final bout.

In what was the best bout of the night George Hoffman of New York defeated Jimmy Mendes of New Bedford in the 175-pound final. The latter, a southpaw, was out in front until the middle of the second round when Hoffman dropped him with a right to the chin. Mendes got up at nine, but Hoffman carried the battle to him and won the remaining part of the fight.

At the end of the three rounds the officials disagreed and an extra round was ordered. Hoffman carried this round by a wide margin and was awarded the decision.

The 112-pound class final saw another title go to New York when Harry Liebenson defeated A. Jovino of Pittsburgh. The other New York winner was Joe Hanlon, who took the 158-pound title by winning from Joe Gordon of Minneapolis.

Francis Burke, a rugged red-head of Hightweight from San Francisco, captured the 135-pound title. He moved too strong for John Zale of Gary, Ind., in the final bout of the class.

COAST BOY WINS.

The show ended with William Schulz of Buffalo hanging more or less gracefully over the lower rops, having been sent crashing down by a right-hand smash delivered by Milo Mallory, a big, good-looking heavyweight from San Francisco.

Tom Paul of Buffalo won from John Haggerty of Pittsburgh in the 118-pound class final.

GENE TUNNEY

World's Heavyweight Champion

Tunney finds the word "Gimme" is not confined alone to a flapper's vocabulary

AMONG the things that a man inherits with the heavyweight title is an army of what might be called "the tough luck boys and girls." Or, perhaps I might call them the professional beggars.

Since I won the championship, I have received tens of thousands of letters—and about 85 per cent. have been requests for funds.

If I contributed all that was asked of me up to January 1, 1927, I would have to fight about ten championship battles—after which I'd still be in minus about $2,000,000 of the money, needed to make the latter writers happy.

Among my letters is one from a woman in Austria. She stated she had read about how much a heavyweight champion earns, declared that her mathematics led her to suspect that right now I ought to have five times as much money as I needed and—

"Therefore," she added, "I request of you $15,000. I want this money to give my daughter a real chance in life. I want to send her to Paris to complete her education and after that, of course, she will need money to keep her in society where she will acquire the polish necessary for a young lady of today."

No, it was not a request for a "loan." The lady wanted the money as a gift.

REQUESTS OF ALL KINDS.

Requests have come for money to send "dying consumptives" to Arizona; requests have come for money to permit this person and that person to undergo "needed operations." A hundred letters demanded "immediately" sums of money ranging from $10.00 to $1,000, because the writers were about to be evicted from their homes.

I "ran down" some of these letters, because, even though I have only a little money now, I certainly am eager to help the really needy. But as my means permit, I found that 95 per cent. of those "needed operations," "dying consumptives" and "thrown out of our home" letters were from people who pictured conditions that never existed.

They belong to the professional beggar element. They do not use tin cups. They write letters to all persons who are presumed to have become suddenly wealthy.

One woman asked for $250, so she could have "legal fees to get a divorce from my brutal husband." She wrote a very nice letter, and there was nothing wrong with it, except that her husband had died four years before, had left her a fair amount of insurance money, and that she needed $250, to repair her limousine.

SOME ASK LOANS.

Not all the money requests are of the purely "give me" type. Some merely ask for loans. Those who ask haven't any security beyond their written promise to "pay you back some day." Others ask for money to use in promoting some enterprise.

Up to date; 20 inventors—at least they describe themselves as such—have expressed a willingness to let me "in" on their product. They request from $1,000 up to $50,000, for which they agreed to give me a half interest in the business.

The most modest of the group, estimated that my profits would total no less than $2,000,000 within a year. But all this sounded too good to be true—so if I get wealthy, it will not be through a partnership with an inventor.

I've lost count of the number of gold mine and oil land opportunities I have passed up. One fellow wanted a mere $1,500 for a half interest in a "gold mine" which he declared "will produce $50,000,000 within three years, and half of it will be yours if you will send me $1,500."

Half of it won't be mine, because I didn't send the $1,500.

THE OLD "OIL."

Another fellow had 160 acres of land and was sure that oil flowed in rivers beneath it. He wanted only $2,500 for half interest, promising that he would drill "at least four holes simultaneously with that money and that means that inside of two months you will be getting tens of thousands a day profit."

I'm not an oil expert, but I know that it costs from $7,500 to $100,000 to drill an oil well, and when that fellow said he could drill four at an average cost of $625—well, he demonstrated he knows less about oil than I do, and that lost him a prospective partner.

I've been offered chances to get a partnership in hamburg shops, garages, realty concerns, the fish and oyster business and a "speak easy." One dressmaker, needing capital, wrote to me. She needed a partner with cash. A man had an idea that he could make money in the trucking business. He wrote asking for $50,000 "loan."

And so it has gone.

I only wish the heavyweight championship meant as much cash to me as the writers think. If it did, I could make gifts to all of them, and have about $4,000,000 left —for a new crop of "money asking" letter writers.

Sharkey Uses Rocky Rather Roughly in Workout

By JACK CONWAY

JACK SHARKEY busted through eight rounds at Kelley & Hayes' gym in his first strenuous training for his 15-round battle with Jim Maloney at the Yankee Stadium on May 19.

Rocky Stone took them on the chin for three rounds. Sharkey then amused himself by socking away at the big bag for three sessions, and at the small hour of a couple of rounds

Jack Conway

The new light-heavyweight champion registered 192 pounds when he stepped on the scales after his first workout. This is only four pounds above the weight he was when he conquered Harry Wills.

Sharkey's wind appeared perfect. This is due to the fact that he did road work before reporting for duty at the gym. Jack was to engage in another workout today. He will then layoff until the end of the week when he will shift his training camp at Stillman's Gym in New York.

All Sharkey needs is two weeks of strenuous gym work to put him on edge for a contest with the Boston boy. Unlike most heavyweights, Sharkey exercises regularly between bouts and so does not have to go through a severe weight reducing process when he goes into training.

Harry Kelley, chief of Sharkey's staff of trainers, will accompany the New England heavyweight champion to New York. Manager Johnny Buckley, who is now in New York, is expected here tonight and will join Sharkey in New York the middle of next week.

WHEN Sharkey and Maloney engage in their three-round bout, Referee Kelley said as Maloney's chief second. There was a break when Maloney went under the management of Dan Carroll. Jerry Gardner, who trains all of Carroll's boxers, took over Maloney.

When Abe Freedman, Sharkey's former trainer, was killed in an auto accident, Jack secured the services of Kelley. The latter first gained prominence as trainer of Johnny Wilson at the time the latter was world's middleweight champion. He later handled Jack Malone, Sammy Fuller and other prominent boxers.

Tom Palazola of New Orleans, former trainer of Pete Herman ex-world's bantamweight champion, will assist Kelley. Palazola worked with Sharkey for six bouts with Hyer Wells and Mike McTigue.

Betting on the bout is 10 to 8 Sharkey. The original odds were 8 to 5 Maloney, but there has been a decided shift during the past week to the 10 to 8 odds conquered Wills, Godfrey and Renault.

AL MELLO, who knocked out Eddie Roberts in a round, will engage in two bouts next month. He will battle Mayer Cohen, New England lightweight champion, in the city for the Suffolk club while he will clash with Ace Hudkins at the Queensboro stadium, New York. Bobby Goldman tells me Mello will be paid $15,000 for his tussle with Hudkins. The Hudkins contest was assured when the New York Boxing Commission lifted the ban on the Nebraska Wildcat.

PAT McCARTHY, Roxbury heavyweight, has gone to Hartford to train for his ten round bout with Mike McTigue, which will be staged at Madison Square Garden on May 9. Manager Jim MacDonald says he finds McCarthy fights better when he trains at Hartford.

Adam's Apple Wins 2000 Guinea Stakes

Newmarket, Eng., April 27 (A.P.)—Adam's Apple, by Pommern, out of Mount Whistle, and owned by C. W. S. Whitburn, won the Two Thousand Guinea Stakes here today.

Frank Curran's Coil Boy was second and Lord Derby's Stella was third. Twenty three horses ran.

Adam's Apple, which was quoted in the betting as 20 to 1 against, won by a short head, while there was a half length between Coil Boy and Stella.

The odds on Coil Boy were 5 to 2 and on Stella 10 to 1.

The race, which was the first classic of the season, was over a distance of one mile and the value of the stakes, with extras, was 10,915 pounds.

The 2,000 guineas is one of the oldest of British races, being first run in 1809. The winner last year was Lord Derby's Colorado.

TUFTS GRID SQUAD IN REAL WORKOUT

Medford, April 27.—Taking advantage of the weather Coach Sampson gave the Tufts football charges their first real taste of work today in a pair of scrimmage. If the weather is cool the squad will scrimmage regularly.

Art Thibodeau playing fullback on Team A and aided severely times for long dashes down the field. On the defense he also did good work. Hewitt, somehurst and Miller, members of last Fall's eub eleven, also played well in the back line.

The veterans, Brohaut, centre; Tuxage, tackle; Brady, guard, and Curran end, were also out there, smashing through the scrub line as usual.

Maloney Works Out With Champion Mickey Walker

By J. D. VAN BRAKLE

Long Branch, N. J., April 27.—Jimmie Maloney, Boston heavyweight boxer, started light training here for his fight with Jack Sharkey, also of Boston, at the Yankee Stadium, New York, on May 19.

This morning saw Maloney in a sweat shirt and cap marching some six miles, and this dusk for several days. The road started out the Atlantic gave him an enormous appetite.

The entire party went to Red Bank in the afternoon, where there were the guests of Mickey Walker, middleweight champion of the world. After a short workout, Maloney and Walker entered the ring with him for a six-round bout.

This, according to Manager Dan Carroll, was in order to get the limited muscles into action.

The workout showed Maloney to be in good shape. With his clothes on he weighed 205 pounds. He is confident he will be down to 200 for the bout.

The Maloney party also visited Davey Maple's Cream Park casino where the training will be carried out. It was Maloney's first visit of the workshop and he voted it a most pleasant place.

He jumped up into the ring and went out for the fray. He [illegible] to the heavy bag and [illegible] heavy gusts, and in the evening made merry and tried it out, examining [illegible] the showers and the dressing rooms.

At 1:30 he was entirely satisfied.

He declared that he is ready to [illegible] three rounds at four and jump into training today in earnest [illegible]

Raisins Add to Nutriment of Many Dishes

By MARTHA LEE

MONOTONY certainly does dull our appetites, so it is the duty of every housekeeper who wishes to a family group to offer variety, not only in foods, but in the form in which they are served—new little twists to familiar recipes that you know are popular with your family.

Raisins, appetising, healthful, inexpensive, take an important place in the family diet, as they supply the normal craving for sweets, without the harmful effects of excessive sugar. Most of us eat raisins because we enjoy the flavor, but many do not realize that in these sun-cured grapes is stored valuable nutriment, mainly fruit sugars.

Today I'm going to tell you about some raisin treats that I think will add variety to your everyday menus.

For instance, take the plain one-egg muffin; add a cupful of raisins and bake in a bread pan and you have a delicious sandwich bread for the school lunch box.

For a special Sunday morning treat, have these:

Raisin Cinnamon Pinwheels — Make regular biscuit dough. Roll one-quarter inch thick. Brush over with melted shortening, then sprinkle with sugar and cinnamon and cover top generously with raisins. Roll up like a jelly roll. Cut off pieces one-half inch thick and set in a greased pan. Bake about twenty minutes in an oven not quite so hot as required for biscuits. Or use regular bread dough.

A very good fruit drop cookie can also be made of your one-egg cake recipe. When cake is mixed, add one cupful of raisins, and enough uncooked rolled oats to make the batter stiff enough to hold its shape. Drop several inches apart on a greased cookie pan. Bake in a slow oven. This is a fine school lunch box cookie for the children.

For a nut cake filling, put one cupful of raisins and one-third cupful of shelled walnuts through a food chopper. Moisten with currant jelly until the right consistency to spread.

The thoughtful housekeeper not only provides food which has a strong appetite appeal to her family group, but she also seeks to furnish that which is wholesome and nourishing, to supply all of these requirements at a minimum cost. Raisins, surprising, healthful, in combination add flavor and a wonderful interest to the foods of every day.

Take the old standby, custard bread pudding. Instead of baking it in the usual form, pour it into buttered custard cups, first adding a tablespoonful of raisins to each cup. Set cups in a pan of hot water and bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.), in the center, removing from the oven and serving until cool. To serve, unmold, having the raisins on top. Pour cream or fruit juice around each pudding.

Or make individual caramel custards. Cover the bottom of each custard cup with caramel. (Granulated sugar melted over a slow fire until it becomes a golden syrup). Allow one-half cup sugar to four custard cups. The syrup will harden as soon as it touches the cold cups. Put one tablespoonful of raisins on top caramel. Then add the custard and set in a pan of hot water and bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) until custard is firm in the centre. Chill before serving. Unmold, having the raisins on top. The caramel will hot with a hard sauce.

When making apple pie, add a cupful of raisins and see what a new interest it will have, especially with its cap of rich cream. Serve hot with a hard sauce.

Mixed lemon cream is another good dish with a new turn. Make your favorite lemon pie filling using one cupful of raisins cook all together in a double boiler for twenty minutes. Pour into pudding molds and set aside to chill. Unmold and serve with a custard sauce. This is a good Sunday dish, for it can be made on Saturday.

When cooked breakfast cereal has been left over, add raisins, sugar to taste, and reheat in a double boiler. Pour into buttered custard cups and set aside to chill. Serve with a custard sauce for the children's supper.

Raisins will give a "company" touch to old, familiar dishes and will add interest for the best guests, your own family.

Macaroons — Four tablespoons granulated sugar, one egg white, one-half cup seedless raisins, one teaspoon vanilla flavoring.

Beat egg white until very stiff, then add a tablespoon sugar very gradually, constantly beating. Fold in remaining sugar a little at a time, then fold in raisins and vanilla. Take level teaspoonfuls, cover with mixture and pile it roughly, sprinkle with sugar and bake in a very slow oven and bake about ten minutes or until delicately brown.

Measuring Wealth in Terms of Love

By KATHERINE BACK

MARY BROOKE was quite seriously worried.

Her cheeks were as pink as ever and the gold in her hair shone like sunshine, but her brown eyes were troubled and her funny little mouth drooped a little.

She put down her doll and laid away her book with its bright-colored pictures and its entrancing cover. She stood and looked out of the window a long, long time. Her eyes were very wide and a little puzzled.

Suddenly she threw her arms around her mother's neck. "Mummie," said Mary Brooke, "is daddy poor?"

"Poor?" said Mary Brooke's mother. "Why, what do you mean?"

"I mean is my daddy poor?" asked Mary Brooke.

Mary Brooke's mother smiled, and then she looked far into Mary Brooke's deep eyes.

"Why, no, my dear," she said, "your father is the richest man in the world; he has you and he has me."

Mary Brooke's brown eyes were very grave—she smiled, but she did not laugh.

A minute later her father came into the room.

Mary Brooke's father had been for a long walk down by the sea, where the waves are always telling each other something important.

He had been thinking about a good many rather serious things. Mary Brooke, for instance, and Mary Brooke's mother, and where they would all live when Mary Brooke grew older, and what Mary Brooke would like to have in life—things like these that make a man sometimes a little serious.

"Daddy," she said, "are you a poor man?"

Mary Brooke's father threw back her head and laughed.

"Well, I should think not," he said. "I have you and I have your mother. I'm the richest man in the world."

And Mary Brooke threw back her head and laughed, too. "I'm glad," she said.

Do you know, I wonder, if Mary Brooke knows what a rich little girl she is, with a father and mother who were wise enough and loving enough and truthful enough to tell her just exactly what they did, and to mean every syllable of it from the bottom of their hearts?

For my part, I think that Mary Brooke is a very rich little girl. What do you think about it?

Reed Tells Cause of Trachoma

By Chas. A. L. Reed, M.D., Former President of the American Medical Association

THERE are many causes of blindness, and you are more or less liable to any one of them. There is one cause, however, which exists, chiefly, but not exclusively, in certain localities and under certain conditions to which, fortunately, the majority of people are not subjected. I allude to the condition known as trachoma.

Trachoma, commonly known as granulated eyelids, is a disease widely spread throughout the world. Its early symptoms are itching, burning, or a feeling as though a foreign body were in the eye. The eyes are unusually sensitive to light and tears flow readily. Later on, the sight is affected and may be entirely destroyed, for the inflammation causes ulcers of the eyeball. Although the disease begins in the eyelid, it spreads, sooner or later, to the eyeball.

The formation of scar tissues on the lining membranes of the lid causes the edge of the lid to curl in so that the lashes scratch the eye. This irritation helps to make the eye opaque, and thus prevents the transmission of light into it.

Trachoma was known and treated long before the Christian era, especially in Egypt, which is one of the countries in which it is most common today. Few countries, however, are entirely free from it. It is very prevalent in our Appalachian Mountain district. It increased tremendously in Middle Europe after the war, as a result of bad living conditions.

Since it does not cause death the disease does not attract so much attention as many other communicable diseases, but it causes a great deal of suffering and economic loss. It reduces the efficiency of workers and brings many of them to a state of dependence on the State through blindness. That it is worth attacking is shown by the figures in Missouri, where 20 per cent. of those drawing pensions for blindness owe their condition to trachoma. The cost of the pensions for trachoma is over a quarter of a million dollars a year. This does not include the economic loss of the services of the patients nor of the services of hundreds of others whose sight is only partially affected.

Trachoma is an infectious disease transmissible by the promiscuous use of clothing, towels, etc., by the crowding together of people with low standards of cleanliness and flies.

Altitude, dampness and race probably have nothing to do with its occurrence.

The HOLLYWOOD GIRL

by BEATRICE BURTON
Author of The LOVE WRECKER

Adventures of a Girl From New England in the Movie Colony

CHAPTER LV.

With her heart beating so that she could almost hear it, Bobbie opened the door of Roy Schultz's office. What could he want with her.

She saw him, all at once, not as the Roy she had known as Lottie's husband, but as the great director. The man who could make a girl famous over night if he wanted to. For he had done just that thing for Joan Joyce and many another struggling extra girl.

"Did you want me, Roy?" she asked, closing the door behind her. But her eyes went straight to the blue eyes of Gus who was sitting beside Roy, tilted back in his chair. Between the two men, on the polished desk, stood a squat brown bottle of whiskey and two glasses.

"Yeah. Sit down." Roy said shortly, and she slid into a chair by the door.

He leaned forward over the desk and his eyes went over her, not as if she were a girl he had been seeing for six months or more, but as if she were something he were going to buy—a porcelain vase or a hand-carved chair.

"Think fortune that I just washed my face and put fresh make-up on," thought Bobbie. She was nervous, but she knew that she looked all right in the lettuce-green dress and the black satin hat that showed the wide yellow waves of her hair.

"How would you like to be Cord's leading woman in his next picture?" Roy asked suddenly, and she all but jumped out of her chair.

"All right, Roy," she said faintly. And when she left that office ten minutes later she had signed on the dotted line for $150 a week to be DeLancy Cord's leading woman in "The King."

Gus followed her out of the room. In the hall, dim and deserted at this hour of the day, he gripped her by both arms and turned her so that she faced him.

"I told you once upon a time that I'd make something of you if you'd let me," he said, and while she was wondering what he meant, he went on:

"I bullied Roy into giving you that part with Cord."

Then his hands dropped from her arms, and he ran down the stairs as if he wanted to let his words sink into her mind.

They did sink in. They sank in so deeply that she couldn't get them out of her mind all during the long walk home through the clean, damp Spring air.

She went on thinking about them as she climbed the stairs to her little blue-green room with its crisp white curtains and its blossoming scarlet geraniums.

Why had Gus "bullied" Roy Schultz into giving her a good part and $150 a week? Why, in the first place, had he walked into the book store three weeks ago and given her the chorus-girl vamp part in "Luxury" himself?

"Why should he bother about me?" she wondered, "unless he still cares a little bit about me?"

She put her head down on the window sill, so that the wind lifted the golden ripples of her hair, and looked up at the lanes of stars that crossed the pale gray evening sky.

"I wonder just how much I care for him?" she thought. "A lot, I'm afraid."

"No Love Like That Any More"

A Nice Young Man Came Along and Proved There Was DRAWN BY Nell Brinkley

PATTY was just a pretty girl. Nothing extraordinary about her; unless it was the brightness of her eyes.

She wore a smart little black helmet hat studded with silver pieces; she stilted along on high-heels; she trailed a silver-fox fur down her straight back and under her perfect chin; she powdered and lipped-ed in public; perfectly adored Lillian Gish, and was "mad" about perfume.

Nevertheless she worried about the times. Or one particular bit of them. It was LOVE. Right after a beautiful costume motion-picture she came out upon the streets, and went home utterly cast down. There was no love like that any more.

No man she knew could ever have such a look in his eyes as men once had for the girls they adored. ADORED—that was the word Men didn't "adore" any more. Romance! It was dead and in the perfumed grave.

And then! Just as Patty was getting very low indeed, along came a nice young man of nineteen twenty-seven and most beautifully proved to her that it wasn't so.

Romance isn't dead. He just wears tweeds.—NELL BRINKLEY.

There Were Things About Him Which Bobbie Didn't Like

There were things about him that she didn't like, of course. The way he had of picking up women, taking their love and sweetness, and then flinging them down like wilted flowers. His conceit and his posing she hated too, just as she hated the large diamond he wore on his little finger, and the loud neckties and socks that no one could see for blocks.

Just how her affair with Gus would have turned out, except for a certain happening, is doubtful.

It was a little happening, but it served to throw her and Gus together again.

It happened on a hot April afternoon when "Luxury" was about half finished.

Gus was directing a dance-hall scene. Bobbie sat at another girl Rosemary Riley sat at a table with two extra men. Before them was iced tea in tall glasses. They were supposed to be whiskey highballs, and the girl named Rosemary Riley was supposed to be slightly tipsy.

"Show a little pep—you four over there!" Gus roared at them through his megaphone. "You're supposed to be in a tough cabaret having a good time. And the way you behave, you'd think you were a bunch of mummies!"

"Aw right! Aw right!" bawled back one of the two extra men, a good looking young giant named "Mac" Something-or-other.

And with that he threw one arm around Bobbie, tilted back her head and planted a wet kiss—with somewhat flavored with Turkish cigarettes, in the middle of her painted mouth. Before she had time to protest he had planted a second one on top of the first.

Bobbie's first impulse was to slap his face smartly for him, and tell him what she thought of him. Then, like a flash of lightning, she had changed her mind. The boy's kisses had meant nothing to her. Less than nothing. It would be fun to see what it meant to Gus to have another man touch her, under his very nose. To see if he cared.

She turned to look at him. He had left his chair and was coming across the set toward them, flushing with anger.

"Get out!" he snapped out the words to the boy called "Mac" through his reached teeth. "Don't you know any better than to do a thing like that, you young fool!"

"Like what?" the boy stammered. He seemed very young and helpless—like a child almost—as he looked up at Mac. "You told me to act as if I were out on a wild party, and I tried to show you that I could! What's wrong?"

"You. You're wrong!" snarled, when Bobbie spoke up.

She was dreadfully sorry for the unlucky youngster who has kissed her.

"He didn't mean anything, Mr. MacCloud," she said stiffly. "I'm sorry if that. He just thought it was a good 'gag'."

"You beg Miss Ransom's pardon," Gus interrupted her, his cold blue eyes still on the boy's startled face, "and then get out as fast as your feet'll carry you! I'll let you know when I need a roughneck for a picture!"

He brought his fist down on the table so hard that it shook.

The boy scrambled to his feet, mumbled something to Bobbie, and walked off the set looking for all the world like a whipped cur.

Bobbie Sat Perfectly Still And Watched Gus MacCloud

Bobbie sat perfectly still, and watched Gus go back to his place. Her eyes were starlike and her face was rosy under the cream make-up that covered it. On her lips was a small contented smile. He had done that for her! Sent away the man who had dared to set his lips to hers, even though his kisses had meant nothing to either of them! It thrilled her right down to the tips of her toes.

Then the girl named Rosemary Riley spoke from her side of the table and her voice was scornful.

"I suppose you think that was wonderful, but I think it was dirt cheap!" she said. "If MacCloud was sore at the poor kid why didn't he knock him down like a man, instead of sending him off the set just because he was the director and could get away with it! If I didn't need my seven-fifty a day, I'll bet I'd give him the panning of his life!"

The extra man nodded in agreement. "Same here," he said. "That guy MacCloud thinks he's Will Hays himself, now that he has a picture to direct!"

But no matter how they felt about Gus, Bobbie was grateful to him and the warm thrilled little feeling in her breast stayed there all the rest of the afternoon.

All during the hot afternoon Bobbie went through her part, thinking about Gus. No matter what Rosemary Riley and the extra man thought of him, he'd surely been good to her. She owed him her present job, and the job Roy Schultz was going to give her with a big fat salary attached to it; $150 a week looked like a small fortune to Bobbie.

At 4 o'clock Gus decided to call it a day, and sent everybody off the set. Bobbie came into her dressing room, freshened by a shower and clothed in the crisp white linen he was waiting for her at the foot of the steps.

He looked up at her with a smile in his blue eyes—a pleading sort of smile.

"Picnic supper?" he asked her quizzingly. "Shall we have one out on the beach, like we used to a long time ago before the Spanish War?"

"Spanish war!" Bobbie repeated with a laugh. "Why I wasn't born until after the Spanish War!"

"Well, it seems that long since we had a picnic, anyway."

And so they had one. They bought cold chicken sandwiches and ham sandwiches and little cakes with "squish" in them and frosting on top of them, and coffee in a big tall proud-looking thermos bottle.

They took it all out to the strip of golden beach beyond Santa Monica, beyond the motor road. And they ate it, sitting on a rug of beach grass, with a solemn pelican and three sea-gulls watching them hungrily.

"How did you happen to persuade Roy Schultz to give me that part in "The King?" Bobbie asked, more for the sake of saying something than for any real curiosity.

Gus tore a half of a chicken sandwich into his mouth before he answered her. "Well, he wanted to give it to Monica, but she wasn't pretty enough for the part—and I told him so. I told him my girl was."

"But how about Monica? Wasn't she peeved about it?" Bobbie asked, pretending not to hear that bit about "his girl."

Gus shook his head. She's so scared these days that she isn't worrying much about her career," he said. "She heard that Lottie Schultz is going to name her as corespondent in her divorce case, and it doesn't do an actress any good to have mud slung at her these days. No siree!"

He turned toward Bobbie, wiping his hands on a crumpled paper napkin. The sun flashed on his gold wrist-watch and his diamond ring as he did it, and for a second Bobbie found herself wishing that he didn't wear things like that.

"Funny they never bothered me before," she thought, looking up at him. His face was very close to hers, and the setting sun shone into his blue eyes.

"Bobbie," he said. "It's no use. I made up my mind I was all through with you three months ago, but I'm not. I have an idea I never will be. I guess every man meets his Waterloo sooner or later—and you've mine."

Bobbie shrank from him. "But Waterloo was a battle, not a woman," she said, trying to laugh and failing as she felt his arms go around her, drawing her closer and closer.

"If you still want to marry me," he said, his mouth against her ear, "I want to marry you."

'Forbidden Lips'; Lupino Asks to Marry Jacqueline

ness, nothing merely sensual. But this consideration, she told herself happily, could be postponed.

Nevertheless, that night at the Sea Shell, the intoxication of romance was still upon her like a silvery mantle. Lupino, Lupino, when he saw her, she felt, sensed a change in her—an awakened something that spread like an invasion ocean over her whole being. She saw him first sitting at a side table gloweing . . .

Tom Ware would not be present tonight; she had urged upon him the necessity of long hours at practicing, and had promised to see him the following day. Tonight, now, she missed him.

From Lupino's distant table, in the hectic, noisy cabaret, there seemed to emanate some chilling air that penetrated, that began slowly to tear the shimmery gauze of fairy-like texture that floated about her. Later, he sought her out and brought her to sit alone with him at a small table during a period in which the dance floor was thronged with swirling, revolving figures under kaleidoscope lights.

"What's the matter with you?" he demanded, with a softness of tone that almost masked the searching import of his words. "You have changed somehow—you're unhappy about something." His voice was low, careful.

Jacqueline had never seen him more carefully groomed. His face closely shaved and shadowed by the small light on their table, was handsomer than she had remembered. Peculiarly there came upon her a sensation that he had never been so alive; perhaps it was imagination, but she thought she saw yellowish animal glints in his dark eyes. Her hands, she felt, were growing cold, yet she commanded a degree of resistance.

"I am happier," she said. "I'm in love!"

Lupino, with his strong fingers, pressed his cigarette slowly into extinction in a brass tray. "That's what I guessed," he said quietly. "It's too bad. Tom Ware!"

"Yes."

"I've been pretty busy the last week, on other matters," he said with apparent indifference. "How far has this love affair gone?"

In the back part of Jacqueline's mind was the solid realization that she was free to terminate the acquisition at any moment; she was under no obligation whatever to discuss with Lupino any intimate details of her private life. But more potent was the drag exerted upon her mind, the pulling-out force of Lupino's will. To answer what he asked was easy, natural.

"He asked me, today, to marry him."

"But nothing—happened?"

"I didn't promise definitely."

"I would," Lupino carefully lit another cigarette. "I don't think I asked you to marry me. Will you?"

Jacqueline looked at him steadily and shook her head. "No."

His was perfectly motionless, as petrified for a moment as though he were made of stone. "The funny thing about all of this," he said finally, "is that I can't understand how I have done it, to me, Jacqueline. I thought I was woman-proof. They all looked alike to me till you came along, and then I knew that nothing else mattered a damn. You gave me a battle, but I could be even I wasn't going to get you in the end. I'm that way—when I set my mind on something I want. I get it. It's the way I'm built. I want you, Jacqueline." His hand moved across the table-cloth toward her, but she dropped the hand that was nearest into her lap.

"You're not going to get me," she said in a tight voice.

"I'll either get you," he said with the utmost quietness . . . with the deepest intensity, "or nobody gets you. That's the way it is with me, Jacqueline—I can't help it. I'm built that way."

Tinting Tips

(Copyright 1927)

Here's the secret of giving lingerie, stockings, etc., the most gorgeous tints. All tints are really colors. So any rexf dyes, get an envelope of the actual dye powder at any druggists, for fifteen cents. Do your own dyeing, which saves money and gives you the exact shade you want.

Diamond dyes do perfectly beautiful tinting—in cold water. A dip and it's done. And true dyes don't streak!

Dye-tinting doesn't look weak, however delicate a tone you use; nor does it wash out unevenly. When you want the tint to be permanent, just use boiling water instead of cold!

Regular dyeing of all dress materials, drapes, etc., just as easy. Ask druggist for color cards and suggestions. Or, swatch of ideas in full colors, in new book Color Craft free and postpaid; write DIAMOND DYES, Dept. K30, Burlington, Vt.

Women's Lives

are relieved of a great hygienic handicap in this way. Positive protection—discards like tissue

By ELLEN J. BUCKLAND
Registered Nurse

THERE is now a new way in woman's hygiene. A way scientific and exquisite that ends the uncertainty of old-time "sanitary pads."

It is called "KOTEX." Eight in every 10 better-class women have adopted it.

You wear sheer frocks and gowns without a second thought, any time, anywhere. You meet every day, every business or social demand unhandicapped.

Discards as easily as a piece of tissue. No laundry. No embarrassment.

Five times as absorbent as ordinary cotton pads, it banishes danger of mishaps.

Deodorizes, too. And thus ends all fear of offending.

You obtain it at drug or department stores simply by saying "KOTEX," without hesitancy. Be sure to get the genuine. Only Kotex itself is "like" Kotex.

How To Improve Your Complexion

The secret of a good complexion lies in having a youthful fresh-looking skin. Age has not as much to do with the possession of this valuable charm as many people suppose, for many women well up in the forties have beautiful, white, pearly skins and rosy cheeks that are the envy of younger girls. The reason for this lies in the care given your face and hands. Any woman who desires a good clear, youthful looking white, pearly skin should get from her Druggist a little Ice Mint and apply this at night just before retiring. This nourishes and revitalizes the skin giving it a fresh youthful appearance that is a delight to the user. Ice-Mint is used on either face, neck, hands or arms and even a single application will prove its power to rejuvenate and beautify the skin either for young or old. Ice Mint can be had at any Drug store at little cost and it is truly marvelous for its beautifying properties.

DAILY SHORT STORY

ADVENTURE!

By Eric Heath

"I WONDER if you know," Estelle Westcott remarked, without the slightest trace of emotion in her voice, "that you really belong to the prehistoric era?" A mere sombre frown, she went on to explain evenly, "I simply mean my dear fellow, that you do not seem to be aware that cavemen tactics are—well, out of date, to put it mildly."

"And I suppose you think you belong to an age somewhere around 2000 A. D.," he drawled, with a cynical smile. "Behold, the new woman!"

"And why not the new woman?" she asked. "Women are tired of being treated as if they were too senseless to be able to live their own lives."

Stephen turned on her a look of intensity, his razor blade being suspended in mid-air. It was ridiculous, he knew, to have to carry on these conversations with her while he was shaving, but nowadays, when did a man ever have a chance to talk to his wife except during such moments of enforced intimacy, word—adventure!"

"And that is your only excuse for your outrageous flirtation with Grange Horton?" he demanded.

"Surely, it's as good an excuse as yours for your affair with Beatrice Phillips" Estelle placidly applied a little more rouge on her left cheek, and began to touch up her lips.

"I've explained about that," Stephen replied, returning to his scrutiny of his half-shaved face in the mirror. "She wanted me to help her decide about some investments. No gentleman could refuse a request like that."

"That's what you say" Estelle answered. "But I often ask myself the question, would you care so much about helping her with her business problems if she was fifty and had wrinkles, instead of being twenty-five and quite pretty?"

"It's just your ridiculous jealousy—" he began.

"Not at all, my respected husband," she broke in. "Why not be honest with ourselves? I think perhaps the answer for both of us is just one glorious little word. The "Adventure!" was the answer, Stephen Westcott mused, as he lifted the receiver from the hook in his office that noon. Perhaps Estelle was right. Then, if it was adventure he wants, wasn't it just and fair that she should be allowed to have adventure, too?

A soft, lilting voice came over the phone.

"Oh, Bernice! Yes, Stephen. Are you surprised at my calling?" Stephen said into the mouthpiece.

"Delighted."

"I'm glad of that. I've been thinking, if you're nothing on for this afternoon—Saturday, you know. We ought to take a half-holiday. Owe it to ourselves, don't you think?"

Stephen had spent practically the entire forenoon planning out the most perfect "half holiday" and it did not take much persuasion to make Bernice agree that it would be "heavenly" to run out to the country club for a little golf, then for dinner and dancing at a cafe in the suburbs where the food and the music were both exceptionally good.

He felt a few twinges of conscience as he hung up the receiver. Saturday afternoon had always been set aside for a romp in the garden or a swim with "the young partner," as he called Jim, his five-year-old son. But Estelle had said something about having to take Jim shopping, and he hated the thought of wasting a sunshiny Saturday afternoon moping around by himself. Then, too, some of the younger men had been seeing too much of Bernice, and he wanted to feel the sleek satisfaction of knowing that she would break a date with any of them in order to be with him. Estelle called her a "clinging vine." Well, he for one was old-fashioned enough to prefer that sort of woman.

Estelle and Stephen reached home almost simultaneously that evening. She was taking off her hat and coat in the hall when she let himself in.

"Pleasant evening?" he asked cynically.

"Delightful. And you?"

"Perfect."

Lighting a cigarette he passed by her and went into the living room.

"Take the 'young partner' shopping?" he asked her, casually, over his shoulder.

"Why, no," she exclaimed. "I thought you were going for a tramp with him this afternoon. I left him waiting for you in the garden."

"Well, you mentioned shopping."

"I changed my mind. I suppose the poor child was terribly disappointed when you didn't come."

"I'll apologize."

One of the maids suddenly pushed her way in between them, appearing from the adjoining room. From the whiteness of her face and her terrified expression they knew something had happened, even before she stammered:

"It's—little Jim, sir. Little Jim, ma'am. We couldn't reach either of you. He's been gone since about 3 o'clock. Nurse is frantic. Smithson and Parker have both been out looking. We didn't know whether to notify the police—"

Stephen rushed to the door, in his haste not seeing the look of anguish in Estelle's eyes.

In the chill of a pallid dawn, Estelle still huddled at one of the front windows. She was not aware that she was shivering. The mental torture of those hours of waiting had completely wiped out all physical sensations.

She was very near collapse when she saw Stephen coming. But she gave a glad cry. Against one shoulder he was hugging "the young partner."

Drowsy, bewildered, his little face tear-stained and streaked with dirt, Jim nevertheless roused himself sufficiently to give his mother the parties explanation:

"I got losted"

Then he went to sleep in her arms.

"Shall I carry him up stairs?" Stephen whispered

"No, let me"

Stephen watched, while in the nursery Estelle took off the crumpled, soiled little suit and slipped Jim into clean pajamas. She tucked him in his crib. Then they went quietly out of the room together. In the dim light of the upper hallway, she reached for his hands.

"After all," she said, "he's our great, precious adventure. Isn't he,

Colors Set Off Belt

Cleverly Chosen Colors are what make the omnipresent belt either tone down the vivid or emphasize the sombre frock of Spring. Made of woven raffia, lacquered leather or fancy ribbon, self fabric or novelty banding mark equally smart and effective belts if the shade be chosen smartly to augment that of the costumes with which they are worn. The width varies from one to five inches, but the belts of a suggestion thereof, must appear on every dress, even though the waist or hem hang high or low the waistline shall be placed is largely a matter of personal preference.

NOVEL MILLINERY PIN

Bowing from a bough of brown green enamel, two little bowbirds of cross form an attractive and amusing millinery pin. One of the latest fads in hat ornaments is the combination of rhinestones with enamel.

Slender Lines Rule

The Straight and Narrow Path is the path leading to smartness in coat fashions, for the loveliest silk, satin or kasha coats for Spring are built along straight and very slenderizing lines. Ombre lapin, ermine, calf, American broadtail and monkey fur are the favorite trimmings. Black coats, trimmed in white or black and white fure, are greatly favored, this striking black-and-white combination being extensively featured in the season's frocks and hats gloves and purses, as well as the jet and crystal costume jewelry

STRIKE LOSSES

Last year, that year, 1919 was the worst of the post-war period for days lost through strikes. In that year the loss was 35,000,000 days. In January to October last year more than four times that number have been lost.

A WIFE'S MEDITATIONS

By HELEN ROWLAND.

If a woman can't be anything in a man's life, she likes to feel that she is at least an "influence."

* * *

* * *

Nothing so startles and astonishes a man as the discovery that he is emotionally interested in a woman with whom he thought he was just amusing himself.

* * *

Many a man has kissed a girl whom he had not the slightest desire to kiss, simply because that was easier than trying to think up something clever to say to her.

There's something about the sight of his wife's photograph on a man's desk that takes his stenographer's heart right out of his work.

What a man cannot understand is why a woman insists on putting him on a pedestal—and then sees him for alimony when he slips off of it.

* * *

"The sleep of the just" is a popular myth—but from our observation, it is usually the UNJUST who sleep sweetly until noon, while the "Just" are downtown working for a living.

This Discovery Will Benefit Millions

Mr. W. J. Dorion, New York, writes: "Sick headache, indigestion and constipation have troubled me for years. I tried everything but truthfully your CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS is the best laxative I have ever used. I find that they are small, easy to take and their action does not pain me. They keep me regular and I want to tell you how I appreciate this purely vegetable medicine, knowing, due to my experience in laboratory work that laxatives, containing Mercury, Calomel and other poisonous drugs are injurious." CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS can be taken by everyone in the family in perfect confidence as they are a doctor's own formula. Ask your druggist for the genuine red pkg. 25c. and 75c.

FINE FOR CHILDREN!

Give them a good start in life, with happy smiles and healthy little bodies. Children need a mild corrective occasionally to regulate stomach and bowels. Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a safe vegetable compound mixed with olive oil. They tone up and regulate the eliminative tract. Not a nasty cathartic or habit-forming medicine, but a safe, pleasant remedy for constipation, sour stomach, torpid liver, bad breath, and similar disorders. Dr. Edwards, a widely known family physician of Ohio, prescribed these tablets for many years in his own practice. Children from six years up are greatly helped by them and like to take them. Recognized by their olive color, Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets overcome those irritable spells that many children are subject to, keep their bodies in active healthy condition, skin clear and eyes bright with the light of perfect health. 15c, 30c and 60c sizes.

Equal parts of ammonia and turpentine will take paint out of clothing. Saturate the spot two or three times, and afterwards wash out in soapsuds.

Easily Trained to Perfect Regularity!

It's so easy to have regular, thorough, and natural movement of the bowels every day! A little calcium—and Nature does the rest. Don't take harsh, habit-forming cathartics. Nor sickening salts. A tiny calcium wafer now and then avoids all need of them. Calcium cleanses the blood, too, and clears the complexion like no lotion could ever do. Pure calcium keeps you in the pink of condition.

Origin of These Leaders Encouraging to Young Men

By B. C. FORBES

NEW YORK, April 27.—Who are the real leaders in your city? Are they the sons of the local leaders of a generation ago?

Probably not.

Are they not, rather lads who came from the country and battled their way to the top? As I sat at dinner of notables in New York the other evening I mentally went over the career of every one present whom I knew. Not five of them had found the table were either the sons of somebody or native born Yorkers. Almost all were from rural districts or small communities of towns of moderate size. Quite a number were from the West and Middle West; some were from the South; a few hailed from overseas; few, great guns to the small republic.

STOP and do a little thinking for yourself. Call the roll of the most influential men of affairs you know or know of, and see how many of these are first-generation men who started under humble circumstances and outside of teeming cities.

Judge Gary was an Illinois farm boy and did his first work in the fields. John D. Rockefeller was not city-bred. Henry Ford toiled on his father's farm before he thought of moving city-ward. Owen D. Young, head of General Electric, was raised in rural surroundings, as was Arch Shaw, head of System fame. Charles M. Schwab drove a country stagecoach and served in a small village grocery store before he landed a dollar-a-day job in a steel mill. George F. Baker, the most powerful as well as the richest banker in New York, was a rustic.

Charles E. Mitchell, head of America's only billion-dollar bank, had his beginning in a small Massachusetts town. So did Walter S. Gifford, now the 42-year-old head of the American Telephone & Telegraph Company and of its $60,000 employes. A. P. Sloan, now president of General Motors, first saw the light in New Haven. Thomas A. Edison's birthplace was Milan, Ohio, and he first landed in New York hungry and penniless.

G. M. Reynolds, head of the largest bank in Chicago, worked on a farm and behind a country store counter before the city claimed him. Samuel Insull, the utility giant of Chicago, was an English clerk before he crossed the Atlantic and became Edison's secretary. Neither Edson F. White, president of Armour & Company, nor Thomas E. Wilson, president of Wilson & Company, was a city boy—the Swifts are exceptions.

The Van Sweringen brothers, the brilliant rising stars in the railroad world, came from Western Reserve. Among all our presidents of important railway systems, few got their start in important cities.

TIME AND TIME again during my travels over this country I have been impressed by the fact that in many, many cities the most dynamic and powerful citizens were wholly self-made men. In not a few many cases they were not natives. Apparently, outsiders can frequently see opportunities that are hidden to those who have grown up with a community.

"NEW YORK is often called an unfriendly city," said one experience has been that New York is a friendly city to the young man who applies himself diligently, intelligently and ambitiously to his job," declared the guest of honor at the dinner already referred to. There is no opposition to brain. Rather, is there a keen and constant demand for brain.

The speaker, incidentally, was not a native born New Yorker and his first job in the city was humble enough.

* * *

AFTER ALL, is it not encouraging for most of us to know that it is not birthplace or birth that counts, but brains—not so much the brains we inherited but the pains taken to cultivate, develop and harness our brain cells to useful activity with all our might and main?

NATIONAL POLICIES OF THE HEARST NEWSPAPERS

1. An agreement of English-speaking peoples to preserve peace among themselves and promote the peace of the world.
2. A constitutional amendment to provide for the election of United States Senators in numbers proportionate to the population of each State, but no State to have less than two Senators. A reapportionment of Congressional representation immediately after every census, or in case of the failure of Congress so to act, to make the apportionment automatic at the end of the first Congressional session, the proportion of population for each representative in each case to be that of the existing Congress.
3. A separate Department of the Army, of the Navy and of the Air Forces, all united under a Secretary of National Defense.
4. Federal action to the limit of Federal Government powers to abolish illiteracy among the people of the United States, and the creation of a Secretary of Education.
5. Necessary measures to secure the election of Congress in November and its installation on the 1st of January following, and the inauguration of a President on the 1st of January immediately following his election in November.

GOOD NEWS

Plenty of It, Concerning New England, If Only We Will Find Time to Look for It.

News of the shutting down of an antiquated mill employing 125 hands is carried by the telegraph to the uttermost parts of the U. S. A., and within ten days forty after-dinner orators are popping up here, there and everywhere to deny that New England is "slipping."

No one has ever yet identified the man who SAID New England is slipping.

The suspicion grows that there "ain't no such animile."

It will not be contended that the present is one of the most prosperous seasons industry has known, for it is anything but that, and, on the other hand, reports from many quarters in New England suggest that this section is at least "holding its own."

For the first quarter of 1927, the Pacific Mills report net sales at the annual rate of close to $40,000,000, while net profit for the period was $290,271. Manufacturing operations, on the whole, are described as "slightly better than a month ago."

The United States Finishing Company, a textile organization operating plants in Providence and Pawtucket, R. I., Sterling and Norwich, Conn., reports net profits for the past year of $646,088.

At Adams, Mass., the Berkshire Manufacturing Company announces plans for the employment of approximately 400 ADDITIONAL men, and "if the right kind of help is available" will begin in two or three weeks. The plan is to keep spinning, weaving and carding departments busy night and day. * * * "Within six months," Editor Fred Babcock of "Fibre and Fabric," told the Androscoggin Valley Mill Men's Association at Lewiston, "New England cotton mills will show a DISTINCT improvement."

In the shoe industry, the manufacturing season recently ended is shown by reports of the Haverhill Chamber of Commerce to have been a successful one. Haverhill, the report says, is "not alone the most prosperous shoe center, but probably the most prosperous city of its size in New England." * * * Much has been made in dispatches about the closing of a Rice & Hutchins shoe factory, on Main street in Marlboro * * * The other side of THAT story is that the Rice & Hutchins company is to REOPEN a factory on Cotting avenue, in the same city, "on a larger scale." * * * American shoes of a value of $13,279,000 were shipped last year to 87 different foreign countries.

This is the rush season in the manufacture of motorcycles, and one Springfield organization, employing 300 men, is turning out 100 motorcycles daily. The director of the plant is described as "enthusiastic over prospects."

How the knitting industry is improving is suggested by a dispatch from Laconia, N. H., where the largest manufacturer of knitting machines in the country is keeping 630 skilled mechanics busy. According to the 1926 report of the New Hampshire Commissioner of Labor, the same shops employed last year only 165 persons.

Boston markets have been showing the "first mackerel of the season," a reminder that Boston and Gloucester fishermen are busy off Virginia. Captain Ralph Webber brought his steamer "Florence K." into Cape May, N. J., a day or two ago, with the largest catch of the season, 40,000 pounds. The retail value of that catch was $7,200. * * * On or about July 1 the Atlantic Coast Fisheries Company will open a new packing plant at Groton, Conn., where 150 men will be employed.

Meanwhile, "resort" New England is preparing to welcome the Summer visitor as well as the Summer resident. Painting, remodelling, redecorating are the order of the day. At Ear Harbor something like a boom is in progress, with four big building projects under way and "every contractor in town employing big crews."

"Business THUS far in 1927," Mr. James J. Phelan of Hornblower & Weeks is quoted as saying in a Portland, Me., interview, "is fully as good as it was one year ago at this time. Judged from bank clearings, car loadings, the employment of labor and kilowatt-hour consumption, it is holding its own and in some cases is even better."

New England, in fine, appears to be getting at least its share of prosperity, We are "doing well." We are going to do very much better, and that right away.

A Visiting Critic

Mr. Ganeshi Lall is Entitled to Another Guess

Ganeshi Lall, visiting Hindu, is appalled by the freedom among American women. He sees them everywhere doing as they please, competing with men and showing no timidity. He therefore concludes that

"Matrimony is a much more serious and sincere matter in India than in America."

As to the seriousness of American matrimony, Mr. Lall is entitled to another guess. The seriousness does not end with the divorce, but overlaps into the alimony.

Our visitor, who has been in America long enough to become a critic, which usually takes at least three days, also relieved himself of another little gem which should be passed down to posterity:

"American wo[illegible]are not like women in India."

"Each clime to [illegible]te. Meaning no disrespect to anyone, we are not.

TRAFFIC PROBLEMS IN THE CITIES

By DR. FRANK CRANE

THOMAS A. EDISON recently was interviewed upon his idea of what the cities of the future would be like.

The thing that will bring about most of the big changes in our cities, he said, will be attempts to solve the traffic problem.

The cities of today were built for horses and pedestrians. Narrow streets and sidewalks took care of all the slow moving traffic of the day.

In less than twenty-five years the automobile has changed the whole problem of city building.

Automobiles take more people at greater speed from place to place. Movement is accelerated in all directions. When there is a tie-up its effect spreads to great distances.

The first effort in solving the problem of caring for the new traffic conditions must be directed at "the neck of the bottle."

"The contents of a bottle," says Mr. Edison, "are so much, the capacity of that bottle's neck is so much. Any mathematician who is worth his salt can tell you how rapidly those contents can flow in or out."

In every large city there are certain arteries of traffic that lead to and from busy sections. The traffic pours into them and there most of the serious tie-ups occur.

Increasing the capacity of such arteries, or building others to take care of part of the traffic, is the first step.

In many cities a single bridge spanning a river is the neck of the bottle through which the traffic of the whole city has to pass. Thus the movement of traffic all over the city is slowed up because the neck of the bottle is not equal to the contents that must be poured out.

Two other ways in which traffic will influence the future cities are suggested by the inventor.

Traffic lights will be synchronized so large blocks of machines can go for considerable distances at a time without being stopped; and in time two kinds of streets will be recognized. There will be "express" streets and "accommodation" streets.

The former will take care of the fast traffic and the latter of the slow traffic.

WORDS OF THE WISE MEN

Small bodies with velocity have a greater momentum than large masses without it.—Lacon.

Above the fountains of our tears.
—Mackay.

Men may live, but fools they cannot die.—Young.

If I take care of my character, my reputation will take care of itself.
—D. L. Moody.

Make it the interest of others to be your friends. Command honors as well as bestow them.—Dr. Sample.

Experience is a fine word for suffering.—Hannah More.

Of all sad words of tongue or pen,
The saddest are these: "It might have been."—Whittier.

The defects of great men are the consolation of dunces.

BOSTON DAY BY DAY

HUNGRY.

A TENDER-HEARTED New England lady has written to the papers requesting aid in relieving the distressing circumstances of the numerous donkeys in the city of Fez in Morocco. Our world-traveling friend, ALBERT A. SCOTT, is moved to lament over the condition of rabbits on a nameless isle in the Mediterranean. "There are so many of them, they have eaten all vegitation," he says. "I made a special trip to observe it. There is nothing else on the whole island."

EAGER.

MISS LOUISE M. PERKINS of Commonwealth avenue likes action. Although she is doing her utmost in this city for the Red Cross, she is anxious to be sent to the Mississippi Valley for action on the "front." She wanted to go to France as an ambulance driver but her youth prevented that.

WIDER.

Motorists who have traveled over the main highway between BOSTON and PLYMOUTH during the past few days have observed with pleasure the widening of the road at KINGSTON. This high crowned, narrow stretch had slowed up traffic to a large extent. Many fine old trees several feet in diameter had to be sacrificed, making the little old-fashioned houses barren in appearance.

SMILES.

MISS MURIEL SPENCER of Clinton Path, BROOKLINE, is one of the young women volunteers aiding the local Red Cross chapter in relief work. She has assisted and cheered many persons as they entered hospitals for treatment. Her smile left a lasting impression on those she helped.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

"IF I were my own boss—"

He's forty-three—healthy, hard working, steady and has made a good reputation for himself in a certain contracting line. At present he is getting $350 a month, with a fat, yearly bonus, in a position which he has held for the last eight years.

Gus has a sensible wife and two fine boys. They own their own home and car, and live comfortably but not extravagantly. They have started payments on a small apartment house.

"I'm sitting pretty," says Gus, but here's the situation. There's another job open which would bring me in at least twice as much as I earn now. A friend of mine had it and he died lately. It's in my line —only my friend was working independently. He and I started it together, fifteen years ago—then he dropped his job and started out for himself. When he died he was making between $600 and $700 a month. I often helped him out and his customers know and like me. I can take over his work if I want to. But here's the catch—

"If I take over this new job I'll be on my own. It will be all up to me whether I make good or not. I'll drop the security of my present job, with its yearly bonus and what ever future it will hold. But I'll take over something that will look a whole lot better. Everyone tells me I ought to jump at the chance—and I suppose I should. There is nothing that looks better to a man after he has worked for others for twenty-five years, than the chance of being his own boss. And yet—

Gus' Problem

"It sure worries me. I am afraid that I would be wondering all the time if I was going to make good and would be scared stiff if the sales fell low some months. It never seemed to worry my friend much but he was a different kind of a fellow. He liked to take chances—I never did. Yet if a fellow can make good for his employers he surely ought to be able to make good for himself.

"My wife gets impatient with me because I hesitate. She says I ought to jump at the chance and she has it all planned out how much better we would be able to live on twice as much money. But I can't make up my mind—"

There's Gus's problem. It is one of the commonest problems of our prosperous world. We're upstanding, hard hitting, ratin'-to-go people, and each of us believes that he'd be better off if he were out on his own. But, as a matter of sober fact, not one person in a thousand can succeed without a boss.

But don't they work just as hard? Yes—even harder. But it takes more than efficient hard work and honest head work to achieve success in the world today. It takes a certain nerve and verve—a peculiar quality of the imagination—a toughness and a sensitiveness, a caution and a recklessness, that are foreign to most of us.

Another Price

But don't conclude from that that all is beer and skittles for the lads without bosses. If they climb higher than the rest of us they also pay a bigger price for it in anxiety and loneliness, bitterness and disillusion. The glamor which shines so brightly about the man who is "his own boss" is mostly grit.

And there's another price which men pay for success which many of us do not count. There's Gus—living sanely on his regular $350 per, with the oasis and the kids helping him, and the same circle of friends standing by and believing in him. How long would that last if Gus jumped into a sudden and precarious prosperity? Just about long enough for the wife to hustle down to the nearest real estate firm and hire a "richer apartment!" Then the fun would begin. Away with the shabby old furniture and the humdrum days—bring on your fun—let's show them that we're making good! And the false friends would come flocking—the parasites and flatterers with their hands out and their tongues in their cheeks.

But surely some people can stand getting rich?

Yes, some people can stand getting rich. But they're about as rare as the people who can stand doing without a boss.

Think it over, Gus, before you turn your back on the job and the ways you know. There's an old axiom about "biting off more than you can chew." Prosperity breeds a powerful indigestion, brother.
